

Times Secures Rights To New Churchill Book

SIR WINSTON

Serial Starts
October 24

Stuart Keate, publisher of the Times, announced today that the Times, in collaboration with Weekend Picture Magazine, has obtained publication rights to the sixth and final volume of Sir Winston Churchill's memoirs on the Second World War.

The serialization of the new book, entitled "Triumph and Tragedy," will begin in Weekend Magazine on October 24 and then will be carried in the daily issues of The Times thereafter and Weekend on Saturdays, for a total of 30 instalments.

The sixth volume of Sir Winston's work is regarded as probably the most important. It covers the period from D-day up to the Yalta and Potsdam meetings.

The theme, in brief, is: "How the great democracies triumphed and so were able to resume the follies which so nearly cost them their life."

GREAT HISTORIAN
Prime Minister Churchill, maker of history and a man whose diversity of talents is already legendary, is acknowledged to be one of the great English historians. His command of the language, the famous "Churchillian prose," is unrivalled. In writing "The Second World War" in his position has been unique. Not only was he himself at the hub of the activities about which he writes but he has had access to those parts of the documentary record which have until now been kept in the confidential files.

This final volume deals with that exciting period when the democracies swept to victory and planted the seeds of future uncertainty. In the light of increasing world tension it has special significance today.

IN TWO STAGES

Book I is "The Tide of Victory." It opens with a master strategist's report and evaluation of the invasion of France and carries through the action-packed year of 1944. Balanced against the battle action of D-Day, across Europe and the Pacific, Churchill the statesman tells of the fateful decisions and conflicts in the meetings at Moscow and at the Second Quebec Conference, including revealing details about the world personalities who step across this stage of history.

This sets the scene for Book II, "The Iron Curtain." Here is the story of Yalta and the opening of the chasm between east and west, climaxed by the Potsdam meeting and counterpointed by the final military surrender and the downfall of Japan.

This epic tale, which begins October 24 in the Times, is one of the great records of our time, told by the only man alive with the full knowledge of not only what happened but how it happened.

FLORIDA HIT
PANAMA CITY, Fla. (UP)—A powerful hurricane slammed inland over the northwest Florida coast today. High tides and 100-mile-an-hour winds knocked down power lines and broke store-front windows.

Thousands of residents of the area abandoned their homes and shore cottages to spend the night in emergency shelters. The town of Apalachicola was cut off from all but radio contact.

The centre of the storm moved inland a few miles west of here during the morning. Hurricane-force winds spread for miles along the northwest Florida coast in both directions, and heavy rain and high winds were predicted in southeast Alabama and southwest Georgia, in the path of the storm.

CATHOLICS WILL COMMENCE 'LITTLE HOLY YEAR' DEC. 8

VATICAN CITY (UP)—Pope Pius proclaimed today a Roman Catholic "Little Holy Year" starting next Dec. 8 to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the dogma of the Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary.

In an encyclical announcing the special "Marian Year" (Year of Mary), and addressed to Roman Catholic bishops around the world, the Pope urged Roman Catholics to pray for peace, unity of the church and for "the church of silence" behind the Iron Curtain.

The Holy Year will run until Dec. 8, 1954.

Murderous Gales Kill Hundreds in Far East

2,000 Feared Dead in Indo-China;
Toll in Japan 431 Dead, Missing

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP)—Nearly 1,000 persons are known to have been killed by a typhoon which struck the coast of central Indo-China, Pham Van Giao, Governor of central Viet Nam, announced today.

It was feared that the death toll may reach 2,000. The typhoon Friday pushed flood waters over the whole region around Hue. The governor's announcement was only a preliminary report on the casualties.

At least 200,000 were left homeless after the winds and floods swept away their straw huts.

In Tokyo, Japanese national police reported today 431 persons dead or missing in the severe typhoon that ripped across Japan yesterday and left large areas flooded.

Lithgow May Have Set New Air Speed Record
CASTLE IDRIS, Libya (CP)—British jet pilot Michael Lithgow today flashed across the Libyan desert in an attempt to better his 737.3 mile-an-hour world air speed record set Friday.

After completing the attempt, the pilot zoomed into a double victory roll over the Royal Air Force field here, showing he believed he had bettered Friday's mark. (See story Page 3)

Rebellion Crushed
JAKARTA (Reuters).—Indonesia has crushed a rebellion of Moslem extremists in Northern Sumatra, an army announcement said today.

SET CLOCK BACK 1 HOUR

Daylight saving time will end officially tomorrow and clocks will be set back one hour to resume standard time.

The approved time for setting back clocks is at 2 a.m. daylight time, Sunday, which becomes 1 a.m. standard time. But there is no law to say you can't wait until you wake up Sunday morning.

The important fact to remember is—set the clocks back one hour.

Laing Attacks Bennett 'Gag' On Debate

Constitutional Issue Raised by Liberal

Liberal Leader Arthur Laing said today legislators should be allowed to debate individual expenditures under the supply bill to be introduced in the Legislature next week.

"It is a negation of the system for Premier Bennett to disallow debate on individual estimates," Mr. Laing said.

The House last March approved a $94,000,000 interim supply bill to provide funds for the first six months of 1953-54 after the government's defeat.

A second supply bill is required now for the final six months. The Liberal leader's statement came as a minor constitutional issue appeared to be brewing over Premier Bennett's statement that only the motion on the supply bill can be debated—not each item.

The issue will reach the floor of the House next week.

Party leaders have claimed the premier is trying to cut off debate. But the premier says no debate can be held on each estimate because they were all passed by the last legislature.

He said questions about individual estimates can be placed on the order paper, but the ministers can't be questioned on the floor of the House.

Mr. Laing contends there could have been a new government and all new members. "To suggest that these new members would sit in parliament with no control over funds expended during their term of office would be a negation of the system. It would seem part of the tradition and safety that some debate take place on this second supply bill."

Returns From Dead After 38 Years

CHESTER, Eng. (Reuters).—Fred Walker, 60, "returned from the dead" to his home and family here 38 years after he was reported killed in the First World War.

Fred Walker suffered from amnesia from the time he stepped on a German land mine at Loos, Sept. 25, 1915, until his sister and brother discovered him, ill, bearded and penniless, at a local hospital earlier this week.

THREAT OF COMPULSION

Three-Piece Garbage Set Sacred Member's Scheme

Victoria householders should be "compelled" to have three garbage cans, and keep their gardens neat Mrs. Lydia Arsens, (SC, Victoria), told a somewhat startled Legislature Friday afternoon.

The garbage problem, she explained, could be solved by making householders segregate, it into three containers—flattened cans, papers, and waste foods.

"The waste foods could be taken to our city park and composted, thus providing a much superior fertilizer than the commercial product at a great saving," Mrs. Arsens said.

She also suggested water-fronts and beaches could be cleared by youngsters as a project, making an ideal tourist haven.

Mrs. Arsens said the provincial government should take over Beacon Hill Park. (The

REPORTER STALLED GUNMAN

G-Man, Killer Die in Duel In Movie House

BALTIMORE (AP)—A west coast desperado was killed and a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent fatally wounded Friday night in a blazing gun battle at a downtown movie house.

Most of the movie audience, absorbed with the crime picture on the screen, didn't realize a squad of FBI men was shooting it out with the trapped gunman.

Another agent was seriously wounded in the battle on the mezzanine of the Town Theatre here.

Shot to death in a phone booth as he tried to place a call to Los Angeles was John Elgin Johnson, 34-year-old former bank robber wanted for parole violation and as a murder suspect.

Agent J. Brady Murphy, 36, of the local FBI office, was shot in the lower abdomen and died today at hospital. Agent Ray Fox, 39, was shot in the hip.

They were leading a squad of FBI men up the steps when Johnson—being stalled by a Los Angeles operator on his call until officers could get there—suddenly turned and opened fire through the glass door of the booth.

Murphy sagged to the floor. Fox fell backward toward the stairs. Other agents moved up emptying their pistols into the booth.

BOOTH RIDDLED
The phone booth was riddled with bullet holes, the telephone book was punctured and shattered glass lay around the floor. Johnson was dead when he arrived at hospital.

In Los Angeles a newspaper man related how he talked by long distance telephone for almost an hour with the ex-convict while the call was traced and the FBI closed in and killed the desperado.

The reporter, Sid Hughes, told of his experience in a copyrighted story in the Los Angeles Mirror.

Hughes wrote that he had known the ex-convict, John Elgin Johnson, for some time and had tried to aid in his rehabilitation. On Friday Hughes received a call from Johnson in Baltimore.

The reporter said he asked Johnson to call him back in an hour. Hughes, in the meantime, notified the FBI. An hour later the reporter received a second call from Johnson.

Hughes wrote of the second call as follows:

FUNNY FEELING
"Sid, I got a funny feeling," Johnny kept saying. "What do you mean, Johnny?" "Well, when you live like I do you get these kind of feelings and you play 'em," he answered.

As we talked in friendly, amiable fashion the origin point of his call to me was being tracked by the Baltimore Telephone Company.

The operators nailed it down to the theatre in downtown Baltimore.

The shooting itself had a weird, half-wild quality as it sounded to me over the long distance, Hughes wrote.

The gun shots had a "jingling coin" tone, as though someone with a handful of quarters had poured them into the phone booth in six blasts. It was like slugs shattering a coin box.

"I'll never forget that sound, followed by a terrible kind of silence."

Daylight and money hev somethin' in common. Bin savin' both all summer but durned if I kin find any of it.

Y' kin juggle th' clocks all y'-like, but summer's over when them fog horns start.

M' Uncle Zeke wonders if the new-fangled school course c'd help him. Like when his wife hides his bottle from him. "It's effective," he sez, "but it ain't livin'."

Franco Gets Equipment; America Gets Bases

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Spain today signed a 20-year defense agreement giving the U.S. the right to develop and use naval and air bases on Spanish soil and assuring Spain military equipment from the United States.

The action brought Franco's Spain into partnership with the United States in the West's defense against the danger of Soviet attack.

Ambassador James C. Dunn and Spanish Foreign Minister Alberto Martin Artajo also signed economic assistance and mutual defense assistance agreements, the latter spelling out the specific conditions under which Spain will receive military aid.

The state department released the text of the three agreements, together with a statement saying that assistance to Spain totaling $226,000,000 will be supplied under the mutual security program during the fiscal year ending next June 30.

The announcement said that $85,000,000 will be for defense support assistance—meaning various uses in some way contributing to the development of military strength—and $141,000,000 for actual military equipment.

A major aim of the U.S. aid to Spain is to modernize, in some degree and over a period of years, the Franco government's army and naval forces. The army now is estimated at 30 divisions.

The specific bases, to be initially developed by the United States at a cost in addition to the $226,000,000 for Spanish aid, were not named in the defense agreement.

The agreements became effective upon signature and the main defense agreement stated that it would be in force "for a period of 20 years, automatically extended for two successive periods of five years" unless formally terminated by either party.

IWA Interior Workers Vote for Strike Action

VANCOUVER (CP)—Woodworkers in B.C.'s northern interior have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action.

This means approximately 5,000 woodworkers throughout the whole interior may be picketing some 70 mills to back up demands for higher wages.

International Woodworkers of America (IWA) members in the northern division voted 1,368 to 810 for a strike, George Mitchell, IWA district secretary, said today.

Mr. Mitchell said no date will be set for the strike until operators say whether they want further negotiations. "We will give them a reasonable length of time after offering to resume talks Monday," said Mitchell. "If they don't answer, we strike, probably right away."

Already, he said, one mill, at Prince George, has been shut down. About 100 men in the Prince George Planing Mills struck Friday.

Forty-five of the Sons of Freedom sect, including 10 women, drew the maximum three-year term for the nudity. Two women and one man received two-year terms. Other "token" sentences ranged from four days to one day.

Another 69 remanded Doukhobors will be sentenced, October 2.

Resort Fire Fatal
PICTON, Ont. (BUP)—Mrs. Clara Cases of Montreal was killed and another woman injured early today when flames roared through Sunnybank Farms summer resort in Waupoos, about nine miles east of here.

A family-sized affair I swam in at Atami prepared me for the bath I faced in Kyoto.

I was standing in a small tiled room (cupboard we'd call it at home). There were the usual taps in one corner, the run-off holes in the floor, and a small tin bucket for sloshing water . . . and, in a corner a wooden box, about four feet square, topped by a second box not more than two and half feet square covered with two wooden planks.

In a hole under the first tub a gas burner was going full blast.

This was the tub! Built for a small-statured Japanese woman. While I soaped and sloshed I tried to figure it out but as far as I could see no amount of ingenuity could get my 150 pounds into that tub . . . all at one time.

First thing to be done was step up on the top of the first box, the lip of which extended in a sort of platform, around the smaller box. Now I was so high in the air I could look out a small open window and see the little Japanese children playing in the lane below. I'm sure if one of them had looked up there would have been an interested audience in a matter of seconds all muttering "Foreign lady can do anything!"

Home-Made Bomb Found on Tracks
NELSON, B.C. (BUP)—A home-made unexploded bomb was found on Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near here and police said today it appeared to be of the type put together by radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobors.

A section foreman found the bomb two miles west of the Doukhobor village of Greenwood. One of the two fuses attached to the bomb had burned out. Police said the other had failed to ignite.

Federal Surplus Of $283.3 Million For Five Months

OTTAWA (UP)—The government reported a budget surplus of $283,300,000 today for the first five months of its current fiscal year.

The margin of revenues over expenses was $53,400,000 less than the surplus reported at this time a year ago.

A $52,800,000 surplus on August operations resulted from a sharp drop in defense expenditures.

Revenues in August totaled $324,000,000, an increase of $17,600,000 over August, 1952. Expenditures totaled $271,200,000, or $33,500,000 less than in the same month a year earlier.

"The decrease was mainly due to a decrease of $26,000,000 in expenditures of the departments of national defense and defense production," the government said. "However, it is to be noted that while defense expenditures during August, 1953, were well below the monthly average for the fiscal year to date, some substantial payments which would normally have been made in August were made early in the month of September."

COUNCIL OF EUROPE CALLS FOR BIG FOUR MEETING

STRASBOURG, France (UP)—The consultative assembly of the Council of Europe voted by 76 to 7 today, with 11 abstentions, to urge a Big Four conference and an East-West mutual security pact.

The assembly, a sort of advisory parliament representing free nations of western Europe.

Only one clause of a report adopted by the assembly ran into serious opposition—a call for the inclusion of Western Germany in the west European defense effort. It was adopted by a vote of 62 to 17 with 2 abstentions.

The report calls for a conference of the United States, Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia on Germany and Austria. Other issues would be included if practicable.

The proposed East-West security pact would link the United States, Britain and Russia with the proposed European political community of which France would be a member.

Well-Known Dance Director Plans Classes in Victoria

Important news for balletomanes in the Victoria area is contained in the announcement made today that Mara McBirney, well-known Vancouver dance director and adjudicator, will commence ballet classes in this city Monday in the Newstead Hall, 734 Fort Street. Her school will be known as the B.C. Academy of Ballet and will be under the management of Maureen Humphries and Mary Rose Thacker.

Miss McBirney has an impressive background, both as to training and experience and an enviable record of achievement. She studied in London, England, under Madame Judith Esplanade, and in New York City, under the late George Balanchine, and is an authority on "Ballet in Education" syllabus and advanced training of the Royal Academy of Dancing.

She first visited Canada in 1946 and again in 1947 as coach in this work for the RAD. In 1948 she toured the country, coaching and conducting a summer school of the dance in Montreal and Vancouver, opening her school in the latter city in the fall of that year.

Since then she has produced ballet annually in the Canadian Ballet Festival, receiving glowing critical commentary, and this year did the choreography for "The Atom" ballet, which was a highlight of the festival at Ottawa.

Adjudicating, lectures and demonstration on various phases of ballet have taken her to musical and dance festivals throughout Canada and she is now RAD organizer for B.C. In Vancouver she will do a series of lectures at the Vancouver Art Council of the Civic Ballet Society. She is a member of the Canadian Dance Teachers' Association and secretary of the B.C. Ballet Association.

Miss McBirney is currently undertaking dance production for the first UBC Review.

Her classes in Victoria will include children and adults. Appointments can be made by phoning G5532 or Belmont 3748. The Newstead Hall location will be a temporary one as Miss Humphries and Miss Thacker state they are seeking permanent premises in the city.

Mr. Uphill told the House many B.C. hotel owners would rather pay a $300 court fine than face "persecution" from an overzealous policeman who failed to make a charge stick. He was dealing with liquor.

Mr. Uphill, who was 79 last June, said in a few years, maybe, "when I'm old enough and retire on my own free will," he'll come to live in Victoria and learn to play golf.

Gordon Gibson, of Lillooet, who took M.L.A.'s on what he called a bus tour of his riding, is one of four quite fabulous brothers who were born and grew up in logging camps and fishing villages of the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

They must have learned to love politics at their father's knee because another of these Gibsons, Jack, was MP for several years for Comox-Alberni.

For years, no matter where you traveled on the west coast, you were sure to bump into a Gibson.

Jack was in the public gallery Friday to hear Gordon make his maiden address.

Mrs. Arsens suggested the Legislative Buildings' hundreds of outer lights be lighted more often.

She said the cost is only $1.35 an hour.

British Labor Criticizes U.S. 'Witch-Hunting'

American Foreign Policy Under Attack

LONDON (UP)—The leaders of Britain's Labor Party denounced American "witch-hunting" Friday night and attacked U.S. foreign policy all around the world.

A foreign policy resolution drafted by the Laborite national committee for debate at the party's annual convention next week opposed the American stand on practically every major international issue, and closely followed the Soviet line on a number of points.

The resolution was a logical sequel to the political meetings of recent weeks, which have seen such unlikely political bedfellows as moderate ex-premier Clement Attlee and blustering leftist leader Aneurin Bevan united for once in attacks on America's foreign policy.

Observers here believe the Laborites hope to use anti-Americanism as a means of healing the two-year-old breach in British Socialist ranks.

The foreign policy statement did not represent an unconditional surrender by moderate Laborites to Bevan's "hate America" wing of the party. Although it opposed the United States on most major issues, it supported the Atlantic Pact and in some minor instances was critical of Russia.

Up to the time of Julius Caesar most foot coverings were mere sandals.

Canadian Says U.K. Guessed Correctly on Wheat Price

MONTREAL (CP)—Fred T. Rowan, federal deputy controller of transport, said Friday night the United Kingdom "seems to have guessed correctly on the fact the world market price for wheat would drop below the price set" in the International Wheat Agreement.

In an interview, Mr. Rowan said there is an over-abundance of wheat in Britain and the grain is being stored in any available space. As a result of the situation in Britain, he said, Canadian elevators are clogged with wheat and coarse grains.

The United Kingdom is our best customer and when we have trouble there, it's bad," said Mr. Rowan.

Meantime, Canadian shipping officials, who declined to be quoted by name, said the price of wheat will have to be reduced below the IWA price because the demand has dropped sharply.

Mr. Rowan said there are 17,000,000 to 18,000,000 bushels of wheat in St. Lawrence River ports and there is a hull in ship.

The U.K. decided to take a chance and buy at the world market price.

Mr. Rowan said freighters carrying grain to the U.K. were waiting for over a month to be unloaded. He said there was an over-abundance in Britain and the grain was being stored in any available space.

Square Dance Fans Gather For Gay Whirl

Victoria Curling Rink saw more whirling, twirling, scraping and bowing Friday night than it has since opening last year.

But it wasn't the broom-sweeping sport that was being enjoyed.

Something like 600 barn-dancers were kicking their heels at a colorful square-dance jamboree which brought participants from Seattle and all parts of Vancouver Island.

The curling rink was vividly decorated... and so were the participants, many of them in flashy western garb and gay cabana skirts.

A group of Scotsmen, recently out from Glasgow, joined the frolic. It was the first time they had seen square dancing, but they brought to the floor all the verve of their native Highland steps.

The callers were in form. John Mooney, Dawn Draper, Ernie Livesay and Jack Matthews and Clarence Nelson of Seattle were original and amusing, maintaining the pace of the dance. Fred Usher led the Hometowners in accompaniment.

Square dancers from Dial Twiddlers group, Seattle, flew over in a body Friday. Others came from Mesachie Lake, Cowichan, Duncan, Youbou, Chemainus, Ladysmith and So-menos.

Ten groups were represented from Victoria: the Wagon-wheelers, Let's Dance Club, Double D's, Mavericks, Rotary Squares, Circle 8, Kalico Kickers, Jeans and Bonnets, Ball-room Belles and Beaux, and Broken Spokes.

Archie Thomson was master of ceremonies.

SUGAR BEET CROP UP
WINNIPEG, Man. (BUP)—Sir Charles Tupper, president of the Manitoba Sugar Company, said today the 1953 sugar beet crop in this province would be 20 per cent bigger than last year.

Sir Charles estimated his own company's crop this year would total about 150,000 tons, compared with 124,000 tons in 1952. However, he warned quality would be "somewhat lower" because of heavy rain and a lack of sunshine during the last couple of months.

QUEBEC DENIES INQUEST REQUEST

Mother, Babe Die After 2 Hospitals Refuse Entry

QUEBEC CITY (BUP)—The attorney-general's office today refused the request of Nazaire Bedard for an inquest into the deaths of his wife from a heart attack Wednesday, and their child delivered a few minutes later by Caesarian section. The child died Friday night.

Solicitor General Antoine Rivard said: "No one is to be blamed for the death of either the mother or that of the child."

Bedard, of St. Raymond, Que., said, however, that two hospitals had refused to admit his 34-year-old wife when he brought her to Quebec City to have her baby. The hospitals said he had failed to make a reservation.

Mrs. Bedard suffered the heart attack, her husband said, after waiting more than half an hour at one of the city's leading hospitals. She was finally taken to the small Notre Dame De La Recouvrance Hospital in Quebec West, which was not equipped to care for her.

An ambulance was called to take her to St. Francis of Assisi Hospital, but she died before starting the trip.

Dr. Robert Darveau operated immediately and delivered the child, who appeared normal but lived only two days.

Today, in the rain, Mrs. Bedard was buried in a remote lot of the St. Raymond Cemetery. She gave up the Catholic religion two years ago and Cure Georges Bilodeau said she thus could not have a church funeral.

The child she never saw, however, "having been unattended, will have full church burial in the afternoon and will be laid to rest in the blessed section of the cemetery," the priest said.

Mental Illness Fault of Foods, Says Legislator

Lydia Arsens Urges Health Campaign

A drive for manufacture of foods as nature meant them to be, "not devitalizing them and making them a poison," was advocated in the Legislature Friday by restaurant owner Mrs. Lydia Arsens (SC, Victoria).

"Let us have a health drive to prevent people from going to hospital and the insane asylums—instead of driving them in. We give all the vitamins to the chickens and eat the trash ourselves."

"Much mental ill health is caused from lack of proper foods, vitamins and hormones because of our devitalized foods," said Mrs. Arsens.

She was opposed to spraying DDT on vegetables because it can poison humans.

CHEMICALS

"Even chemical fertilizers which are fed to vegetables can affect the health of those who eat them," she added. Is there any wonder that our hospitals and mental institutions are crowded?"

Chlorination of Victoria's water, she contended, is "against the principles of democracy." It was a war measure and should be ended.

The MLA said the water tasted at times like it came from a slough.

Fluorination, too, is against the principles of "true democracy," she said.

Mrs. Arsens, dealing with the province's educational system, defended J. A. Reid, (SC, Salmon Arm), who caused a controversy at the spring session when he attacked the schools and teachers.

IRRESPONSIBLE

She noted CCF Leader Arnold Webster had warned against irresponsible critics of education. No Sacred members, she said, fall in that category.

A chorus of "oh's" came from the opposition.

Mrs. Arsens, a former Alberta school teacher, backed up a previous statement of her own by quoting the American FBI which she said warned against Communism creeping into schools.

"ABSD"

"To suggest that the teacher shortage has been caused by statements criticizing the education system is utterly absurd," she said.

Majority of the teachers don't approve the present curriculum, the MLA contended. B.C. has fine teachers, she added.

"Very few parents, children and teachers are satisfied with our system as it is today," she said. "Even the pupils scoff at the idea of juke-boxes in their schools and at the utter waste of time of many phases of the Effective Living Course."

Red Premier Leaves Moscow for Korea

MOSCOW (AP)—North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung left for home Friday night, after a two-week stay in Moscow during which he negotiated a $250,000,000 grant from the Soviet Union. Speaking at Moscow airport in the presence of Soviet Defense Minister Nikolai Bulganin and officials from Communist countries, Kim hailed Russia as the "liberator" of the Korean people.

Air Travel Cost Cut By Family Fare Plan

MONTREAL—A seasonal reduction of fares on Trans-Canada Air Lines for family groups was announced today by W. Gordon Wood, vice-president for traffic.

The "family fares" will be effective October 1, and will permit dependents to travel half fare on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday on all the airline's routes in Canada and the United States, except for Tampa, Florida.

In any family group flying on TCA, one parent will pay full one-way fares in both directions, and each dependent under the age of 22 will be half fare. "A man and wife traveling together thus pay only one and a half fares," said Mr. Wood. "and, in addition, a child under the age of 12 will continue to realize the normal 10 per cent reduction allowed on the purchase of round-trip tickets."

FOUR-YEAR-OLD DUNCAN BOY KILLED BY CAR

DUNCAN — Four-year-old Peter Tiemer was killed Friday at 6 p.m. when struck by a car on Lake Cowichan Road three miles from here.

The car was reportedly driven by Hugh William Bradshaw of Duncan.

"As far as we can ascertain the driver was blameless," RCMP said. There are no charges pending.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Tiemer, the little boy had been playing beside the road near Berley's Corner, and apparently had run out to the roadway in front of the car.

An inquest will be held.

Speed Ace's Sister Here Proud, Happy

When Lieut. Cmdr. Michael Lithgow became the "world's fastest man" Friday, over the Libyan desert, he ended a week of tension and anxiety for his sister on Vancouver Island.

"We're awfully proud of him," Mrs. R. G. Parker, Cowichan Station, told the Times today, "and it's been exciting all this week waiting for the news. The strain was terrible, and I'm glad it's over."

Cmdr. Lithgow, 33, who joined the Fleet Air Arm in 1938, made four passes over a three-kilometre course in a Supermarine Swift jet fighter at an average speed of 737.3 miles per hour.

His speed was well in excess of the one per cent margin over the previous record demanded by international regulations before a new mark can be claimed.

Mrs. Parker has been on Vancouver Island for five and one-half years. She and her husband operate a dairy farm.

Her brother, who she says "certainly goes fast from here to there," may be in Canada this winter for trips to Alberta and Manitoba.

"I'm certainly hoping to see him if he reaches Canada," she said.

Murderer Mathews Granted Reprieve

VANCOUVER (CP)—Condemned slayer Charles Mathews was granted six additional days of life Friday—because Canada's official hangman will be busy elsewhere Oct. 27.

Mathews was slated to die on the gallows on Oct. 27 for the hammer-murder of Mrs. Los Angeles Smith in her Vancouver rooming house last March. But Mr. Justice J. V. Cline announced in Supreme Court Friday that Mathews had been granted a reprieve until Nov. 2 because the hangman couldn't fill the date.

Mathews, a 20-year-old professional boxer, was known in the ring as Sonny Jones.

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (CP)—James Sutherland, charged with taking more than $200 from a Carberry, Man., store recently, was sentenced to eight months in jail when he appeared in police court here Friday.

Liberal Logger Warns Legislature B.C. Runs Short of Risk Capital

British Columbia is running short of risk capital and the provincial governments new natural resources taxes will aggravate the situation, Gordon Gibson (Lib., Lillooet), one of the country's best-known logging operators, said in the Legislature Friday.

He was referring to the proposed 10 per cent tax on logging and mining company profits above $25,000. The tax is to be applied to the direct logging and mining, and not the processing phase of the industry.

"I'm against it basically," said Mr. Gibson. "Some things make sense and some don't. If you want to start taxing the lumber industry you should start at the outside and work in. Don't cut off its roots. If you do, the tree will die."

The new taxation will stop construction of new pulp plants and other projects, he claimed.

"This may sound childish to the premier, but I assure him some of the things he says sound just as childish to me," said the MLA.

He noted the government isn't talking about heavier taxation on breweries.

"Why not put the new taxes on something that isn't vital to our economy?" he asked. "B.C. can't afford to stop taking trees from the bush or ore from the ground."

He appealed to the CCF group in the House to oppose the new taxes.

"More taxes mean it will eventually come off wages or there will be less jobs."

He said such taxes will change Premier Bennett's 50 years in office prediction to more like 50 weeks.

Mr. Gibson added he doesn't like the province's forest management license system.

"I've been against it all my life. Many licenses have been given away in the wrong places so far."

Australian Minister Arrives Canada Sunday

OTTAWA (BUP)—Australian External Affairs Minister R. G. Casey flies here Sunday from New York for talks with Prime Minister St. Laurent and the cabinet.

The Australian high commissioner's office said the main purpose of his visit was to "renew his personal association with members of the Canadian cabinet."

Injustice in Insurance

MR. ARNOLD WEBSTER IS quite right in saying that the present hospital insurance scheme in British Columbia is unsatisfactory and unfair in one particular.

Any worker on a regular payroll must pay hospital insurance premiums, willy-nilly. They are taken off his pay cheque. But large numbers of people, self-employed, casually employed, unemployed, or retired, can buy insurance from the government or not, as they please. The government, says Mr. Webster, has defied the law and the express will of the Legislature in abolishing the compulsory feature of the insurance scheme by order-in-council. Whether there has been an actual breach of the law, as Mr. Webster alleges, we do not know. Assuredly there has been a breach of the universal insurance policy.

The results are obvious. The person who does not pay premiums is not insured. When he falls ill and goes to hospital he is asked to pay huge bills for service. In many cases he simply cannot pay. It must be a pretty rich man who can afford even a few weeks in hospital at the present rates.

The hospitals cannot collect from patients who lack the necessary money. This must mean that the rest of the community, the people who pay insurance premiums, are left to pay the bill for the uninsured.

In the case of the very poor, who can pay neither insurance premiums nor hospital bills, the community must bear the cost of hospital treatment. Though the issue has been evaded so far, the Legislature will have to draw some line of income below which hospital patients are given free service. But thousands of British Columbians who could well afford to pay premiums are refusing to do so, under the existing chaotic arrangements and, when they fall ill, will unload their hospital costs on those who are compelled to pay those premiums.

As Mr. Webster says, this is grossly unfair. It will be no answer for the government to say that the insurance scheme is now on a paying basis, if it is. Assuming that the government can finance the scheme on the present premiums from those compelled to pay, it could reduce the premiums if it collected from all those who are well able to pay. Compulsion applied to one section of the community and escaped by another is a travesty on ordinary justice. The Legislature should make sure that it is not continued.

Silence on the Stalin Plan

DURING THE LAST THREE years of Stalin's life plans for several great construction projects were announced. These included such works as the hydro-electric and irrigation undertakings listed for the Volga-Don River system, the Tsimlyansk power station, the Kuybyshev and Stalingrad stations, the Kakhovka power centre and the great Turkmenian canal, which would turn a vast desert into a productive plain.

At regular and frequent intervals the Russian public and the world were informed of progress on the different schemes. Such information continued up to the beginning of this year and, fragmentarily, until the time of Stalin's death.

Since then there have been complaints of waste and slowness in the work being done. There have been stories of floods that have destroyed some work and delayed advance.

But most significant, there has been little of the constant flow of progress reports which formerly implied exceptional achievements in realizing the Stalin plan. Conceivably the work is still going ahead, but some great change has occurred in the news importance given to the projects.

The outside world wonders why. Are the gigantic plans beyond realization? Are too many obstacles rising to obstruct progress? Or is this a sample of the new attitude to the importance of the Stalin plan, its author and the regime which ended with the dictator's death six months ago?

Waiting for a Landing Permit

THE PLIGHT OF MICHAEL PATRICK O'Brien—or, as it now appears, Stephen Stanley Raggan—has engaged the interest of news editors throughout the world in recent months. And since editors survive through their ability to guess correctly what interests the public, we must assume that international attention has been aroused by the troubles of this unwilling wanderer.

Michael came to prominence when a news story announced that he was confined aboard a ferry boat plying between Hong Kong and Macao. He had gone aboard without proper identity papers and was unable to land at either end of the route. During the next 10 months we heard occasionally of his misfortunes, and eventually came the news that he had been granted a visa for Brazil and was en route in a French ship.

But still he couldn't land, and now he is an unwanted guest aboard the ship as it resumes its regular Marseilles-Genoa run.

Whatever the rights or wrongs of the situation, there is something about the fate of this man that excites public sympathy, although it might be difficult to discover why. Is it because we may have an unadmitted feeling of envy?

Almost everyone yearns to travel. O'Brien travels for free. Almost everyone pines to be free of harassing responsibilities. O'Brien has none. Almost everyone spends a lifetime working to achieve the boon of idleness. O'Brien has it without trying.

These are the material considerations. But the sympathy may be sparked by a still deeper cause. Are we not all O'Briens in our way?

Is not the average human life a ship whose ports of departure and arrival we know but whose course we are powerless to change? Birth and death, and a few years travel between them—are we not prisoners on a globe which seems all too small for us sometimes, as O'Brien's brig must seem to him?

The engines thump, the propeller thrashes, the bow waves curl as we go our way. But the powers behind them are unseen and implacable. O'Brien may be lonely, but his shipmates number two billion or more.

As Our Readers See It

TO RECOGNIZE VALOR

I was interested to read the editorial that appeared in the September 14th issue of the Victoria Daily Times entitled "For Valor."

Quite voluntarily, and as a sort of extra curricular activity, my office has for many years undertaken the responsibility of drawing to the attention of the Royal Canadian Humane Association of Hamilton, Ont. any cases of heroism resulting in the saving of lives which might merit recognition by the association.

I have not kept count of the number of medals and parchment certificates that have been awarded as a result of these endeavours through the years, but the number most probably exceeds 30. Dave Stock will, for instance, recollect the case of little Tammy Hinch as he covered the presentation ceremony at the Doncaster Road School some two years ago. Tammy was then aged six, and she definitely saved the life of a two-year-old child whom she rescued from the Campbell River the year before.

In your editorial you mentioned the case of Lawrence Lansdowne, who tackled a cougar barehanded. In this case I sent the newspaper clippings to the association on July 23rd and received an acknowledgement from the Hon. Secretary on July 27th. Attestations and statutory declarations were obtained by my good friends, the RCMP, and were sent to the association on the 11th September, 1953.

However, the Association Board of Investigating Governors meets approximately every six months so it may well be some weeks before any decision is made in this case. However, the Hon. Secretary did state in her letter that: "We shall be pleased to take this case into consideration with a view to granting one of our awards."

Should anyone hear of any case where recognition by the association would appear to be merited, I shall be only too glad if he will let me have the details, and my office will take all action required in securing the declarations and affidavits which are required by the Royal Canadian Humane Association before any case can be considered.

R. A. PENNINGTON,
Deputy Provincial Secretary.

HOW IS IT IN SURREY?

No doubt Mr. Hole of Surrey, England, feels that he is doing the people of Victoria a great service in giving his opinion with regard to our Municipal affairs.

He also saw fit to attack the characters of our prospective candidates by branding them "vain and conceited."

Mr. Hole must also be suffering from the same affliction, along with a goodly amount of audacity, when, after just a "stay" in our city, he should think that his opinion about Victorians would be worth anything.

I would suggest that Mr. Hole attend to his affairs in "Chester Beaches," Surrey, England, as Victoria has got along very nicely so far without his advice or opinions.

(MRS.) C. JOHNSTONE,
Apt. 83, 639 Yates Street.

SPEAK UP, PERCY!

The salient point that seems to have been overlooked in the "Percy Wright" case is that quite justly the City Hall did not interfere with this man's right to make an individual bid for election in the provincial balloting. It was Mr. Wright's democratic privilege to do this!

However, he was an employee serving in a civic capacity that required a maximum of daily concentration on City Hall business. His silence quite as much as his obvious desire to have his cake and eat it too, contributed to the embarrassment of his colleagues, detracting from his stature as an employee at the City Hall.

Had he but considered his city with half the zeal he awarded his political party, they could not in this particular dilemma have been exposed to misrepresentation. Mr. Wright owed himself, as well as others, a frank utterance of his withheld intentions. The whole affair has been grossly misconstrued, which has tarnished Mr. Wright's splendid record of service. The case has been pursued with malice aforethought by Sordid reporters. Mr. Wright alone can place it in a decent proportionate light. It would be to his credit to do this at once.

The Seasonal Cycle Makes Another Turn With a New Phase of Life in the Lake

By G. CLIFFORD CARL, Director, Provincial Museum

FOR many days after the snow fell the lake lay leaden under grey skies. Wavelets which entered the bays lapped at the outer edge of the ice skirting the protected shore, rounding it to glass-like smoothness and dissolving away the snow nearest the edge. The surface water outside the bays remained close to freezing, but the slightly warmer layers beneath and the gentle movements of air above prevented the formation of ice.

Dr. Carl

No movement of water took place in the basin of the lake below the surface and activity among the animal inhabitants was at a minimum. A period of rest existed, akin to that on land where most living things slept or moved around very little.

Many of the planktonic animals and plants which had clouded the water of the open lake had now disappeared except for a few larval stages of copepods and water fleas and scattered colonies of diatoms and other algae. Most insect larvae had long since transformed to the adult stage and had left; those which remained were quiescent.

The fishes, too, were relatively inactive; most remained in favorite places for long periods of time, moving short distances only occasionally. In the cold water the demand for food was low and all their movements were sluggish.

In time rain came again, breaking the surface of the lake into complex, swiftly-changing patterns and causing the small tributary streams to pour in larger quantities of muddied water.

With the slight rise in lake level and increased wave action, the fringe of ice in the bays became broken into small pieces which floated free until melted by the warm rain.

As the rain continued to fall the small streams soon became swollen with water shed by the sodden land which could hold no more moisture and new streams formed to hurry the water from melting snow into the lake.

The larger tributaries which gathered their water far back in the hills were slower to respond, but shortly they too became filled with rushing snow water. The rippling sound of unwhirled water became a rumble as leaves, twigs, bits of whitened salmon carcass, sand and silt were swept downstream into the lake.

A fan of deposited material grew out into the lake at the mouth of each stream and the cold, muddy water which flowed over it spread into the clearer water far from shore.

As the level of the lake rose water began to creep into low-lying areas above the summer beach-line. Swamps and backwaters began to fill; flat places slightly higher than the normal level became flooded.

Debris, stranded on the shore during the previous season, was lifted slowly and carried back to a new and higher location. Occasionally water invaded winter quarters of land creatures, forcing them to shift. Mice, garter snakes, insects, and sowbugs came into the open, groggily seeking shelter on drier ground.

At the outlet of the lake water poured into the narrow passage leading to the upper reaches of the river. Bits of trees, bark, and sometimes large logs were caught by the currents and were whirled into midstream. Some, drifting into backwaters, eventually became entrapped in partly submerged shrubbery along the bank; others continued downstream to lodge on a rocky bar or to pile up in a log jam in a narrow part of the river.

Where the water pressed against a bank on a curve, masses of clay, gravel and top soil were plucked from position and carried away in the flood.

The effects of the spring freshet became felt throughout the lake. Stirred by the influx of new water the fishes began to move further afield. The general restlessness caused Kisutch and other yearling cohoes in the lake to begin wandering along the shore and into recently-flooded areas.

Soon they felt the pull of the current at the outlet. Heading into the stream they allowed themselves to be drawn backward into the river on the first phase of their journey toward the sea.

LOOSE ENDS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Autumn Gladiators

IT is highly gratifying to see that we still have among us brave men who are prepared to face, with no weapon except a high-powered rifle, those deadly enemies of the human race, the deer. And then, with becoming modesty, are ready to pose for newspaper pictures with the slaughtered carcass of a creature which otherwise might still be roaming the woods and imperilling human life.

Hutchison

I salute the fearless deer slayers with special reverence because I have been terrorized by deer all summer long. Three of them, a female with two fawns, have been haunting my camp, have spied on me with diabolical cunning, have followed my trail through the timber and cold-bloodedly plotted my destruction at the first convenient opportunity.

Only because I am more cunning than the deer have I been able to survive until autumn and, with luck, will reach the safety of the city before the crime is committed. But it will be a damned close thing, to quote the exact words of Wellington after another narrow escape at Waterloo.

YOU may well ask why, against a ravenous female and two apprentice killers by her side, I have not taken the offensive, bought a gun and, from the protection of my doorway, exterminated the enemy with three inexpensive bullets.

HIS CHOICE WAS FOR THE WEST

They See Him as the Best Since Bismarck

THE parliament of West Germany was engaged in hot debate on co-management—the system whereby employee representatives in the great industries of the country would be elected to sit with company executives in joint councils to determine policies and procedures.

As Chancellor Konrad Adenauer emerged from the legislative chamber, so the story goes, he was asked, "And when, Herr Bundeskanzler, are you going to grant co-management to your cabinet ministers?"

By itself, the anecdote presents a picture that is not strictly true. But it does highlight one of the attributes of a man who, once dismissed by British occupation authorities from the mayoralty of Cologne on the grounds of inefficiency, now holds the highest position of power in the republic.

Adenauer is not the ruthless autocrat the story implies. But there is enough in the tale to give it plausibility. The government of West Germany is not entirely a one-man show, but there is no doubt that the Chancellor's ministers are individually and collectively afraid of him.

He can be politically brutal if the situation calls for brutality—a characteristic not unknown in times past in Ottawa. He will use overstatement of his cause or distortion of his opponents' if this seems necessary to win his point. But he is no hypocrite and is too much of a historian to aspire to dictatorship.

FIRST MAJORITY

By and large, he seems to be what the new republic of West Germany wants. In the general election earlier this month the voters gave him and his predominantly rightist Christian Democratic Union the first overall majority a post-war party has enjoyed. In return Adenauer has restored what one writer describes as "a sense of proportion in concept and execution which has been sadly lacking in German political life since Prince Otto von Bismarck disappeared in 1898."

There have been tangible results for the Bonn republic, whether or not the country's leader can claim full responsibility. The West German recovery has been without parallel in modern times. From a state of national shock, their industrial machine largely shattered and their markets gone, the people have attained a position, domestically and internationally, that is the envy of more than one of the "victor" nations.

In that achievement, Adenauer's leadership has played an important part. The republic has a solid, workable governmental system based on a democratic constitution. With that political background, the economy has prospered.

The fact, of course, is that I am afraid. I lack the courage to face the enemy and, besides, the enemy, whenever I appear, fades into the woods, waiting there to lure me to destruction. I have escaped only by staying close to the house and putting new locks on the doors.

Now that the deer season is opened by law I am confident that the hunters will solve my problem. A good hunter, trained in the art, should be able to creep within range of the enemy when I have often been as close as 10 yards. A skilled hunter should be able to hit the target at that distance and, anyway, the deer and her fawns have become rather careless, taking me, in their ignorance, for a friend, or at least an easy victim.

THEY will doubtless hang around all autumn, waiting for other humans to appear. Let the hunters approach cautiously, however, for the deer, for all its harmless look and big, friendly eyes, is a killer, as every experienced sportsman knows.

I have always marveled, therefore, at the recklessness of hunters who venture into the woods, armed only with a gun, never hesitating to risk their lives, on equal and sporting terms, with the quarry. The age of the gladiators is not dead in these parts.

BUT this is also the age of modern weapons and I cannot understand why the hunters still feel compelled to use such a primitive device as a hollow rod of steel and a charge of cordite. It is much too risky and gives the deer a grossly unfair advantage. Why, even in Russia they have lately exploded a hydrogen bomb which of itself could instantly dispatch all the deer on this island, and yet we find men who, carrying sportsmanship to wild extremes, refuse to carry anything more powerful than a rifle of small gauge.

THEIR hardihood is to be praised but surely there should be a law to save them from themselves. Suicide in any other form is illegal under the Criminal Code. Why should it be permitted, indeed licensed and encouraged, with resulting revenues to the government, in the case of deer hunting? If hunters must face the deer in the autumn the state should see to it that they are at least properly armed with all the weapons and protective devices which science has lately discovered.

NATURALLY, after a perilous summer, besieged in my camp, I am eager for the arrival of the hunters who will clear the woods of danger. To this end, with a fine sense of strategy, I have deliberately encouraged the deer to show themselves in the open, where they will present a clear target to the executioners, with a minimum of danger.

But I do not wish some gallant fellow from the city to undertake this adventure on my account unless he knows his business, unless he has calculated the risk, is armed with the best possible weapons and has taken out an adequate life insurance policy for his wife and family. And if the deer are still in these parts next spring I shall blame no one but myself for an inexcusable cowardice and my lack of a gun.

KONRAD ADENAUER

Naturally American and British aid has been a big factor in this recovery—on a scale probably unprecedented in any victor-and-vanquished relationship. But similar aid has been available to France and Italy, whose recovery is sadly behind that of the former enemy.

In the international sphere, Adenauer is strongly pro-Western. A keen student of history, he recognizes that every nation today must choose between the two great powers, Russia and the United States. Both his heart and his mind were at one in his choice.

A strong Catholic (although his party is composed of both Catholics and Protestants) he could not be an ally of the Soviet. A realist, he saw that Germany's destiny lies with the west.

CRUCIAL ELECTION

The recent West German election was a crucial one. Adenauer himself had described it earlier as of prime importance in "the fate of Europe, the fate of Germany, the fate of Christian civilization."

While history may not give it that pivotal status, there can be no doubt that a defeat for the Chancellor would have thrown Europe into a turmoil and probably have wrecked western plans for co-operative defense against the Soviet.

West Germany is the only state so far to have ratified the western European defense treaty. Although the long delay by the other powers—notably Italy and France—has by now raised serious doubts as to the possible success of the plan, it still remains a major item of western policy. There is no other alternative in view. West Germany's rejection, through defeat of the man who had staked his career on co-operation with the west, might have killed the joint army program completely, and in any case would have scored an important victory for Russia.

Adenauer's political astuteness achieved new heights in the course of the election campaign. His major opponents, the Social Democrats, came out strongly for unification of East and West Germany—a goal toward which every German aims. Adenauer also supported a unification policy, but said a first step was to strengthen West Germany's position through alliance with the western powers. Neutrality, as urged by the Social Democrats, could result only in playing into the Russian's hands, Adenauer claimed.

SOVIET BLUNDERS

A series of Soviet blunders, which included the Russian handling of the workers' riots in East Germany, weakened the opposition's appeal. The result was a smashing victory for the Christian Democrats. Although their majority is only one vote in the legislature, the support of minor parties gives them a firm grasp on the reins of government and frees them from the handicaps of enforced compromises with their chief opponents.

An interesting side effect of the election was that the representative parties were narrowed down to six, eliminating many small groups. In effect, West Germany has come close to a two-party governmental system—a valuable asset in charting a firm course in the chaotic global seas.

Adenauer's hand will continue on the tiller despite his advancing age. Those who have known him at close quarters report that he shows little of the usual toll of time. His step is brisk, his figure erect, his face and hands unmarked by his 77 years.

Conceivably, he could yet lead a united Germany which, with "a sense of proportion in concept and execution" could take its proper place in world affairs.—B.A.T.

Sombre Story Of Germany's Disintegration

The spiritual disintegration of defeated Germany and the burden of guilt borne by individuals for a nation's sin, is somberly depicted in The Quest (Knopf) written by Elizabeth Langgasser.

Published in Germany in 1950, and the first of Mrs. Langgasser's 11 volumes of novels, poems and short stories to be translated into English, this is an account of seven Germans in search of understanding for themselves and for the future.

There are the actor Albrecht, the tormented young widow Lotte and her brother Ewald, who bears the pain of murder for a life lost because he refused his hand in help; the soul-searching girl from the underground, Irene; the homecoming soldier, Friedrich, lost in cynicism; and the elderly Levi-Jeshower couple whose nights are shared with the dark horrors of the pogrom.

Setting out individually for Anstasiendorf, the village of the Resurrection, from still crumbling Berlin in the summer of 1945, they share their pilgrimage to the ancient convent where each hopes to "find the beginning."

Disjointed at times yet brilliant in evoking shifting moods of gaiety, love, terror and hopelessness, The Quest gives a remarkable picture of postwar Germany—(UP).

Bonanza Gold Rushes

Speak of bonanza and gold rush and the names that come to mind are Virginia City, the Mother Lode, Comstock, Goldfield, the Klondike, the South African Rand. Yet the name that should be among the first is hardly known at all. In "Money Mountain" (Little Brown), Marshall Sprague tries to rectify the oversight with an account of Cripple Creek, Colorado. No other small spot on earth ever gave so much gold to so many people for so long. It turned out 28 millionaires in a quarter century. It spilled out $432,000,000 worth of gold in 61 years.

Canadian Scores Hit With Eloquent Saga

Vancouver's Skid-Road, Comox and Nanaimo Setting for Moving Story

LILLY'S STORY, by Ethel Wilson, 208 pp., New York: Harper and Brothers, $2.75.

(Reviewed by Stuart Keate)

"Biddable" was the word for Lilly Waller. Like the little yellow cat she sat fondling, the day she heard her drunken mother and the lodger quarrelling about leaving the kid behind, she was small on this earth. Deserted and unloved, she lived where she could; amoral, unrepentant, expecting nothing.

Thus, when a dark young man asked her if she would like to earn a quarter running small packages for a fancy "Anty" in Vancouver's skid-road district, Lilly was amenable. When police raided the house, she was frightened into a profound instinct for self-preservation: an instinct adorned, she discovered, by a spectacular talent for lying.

As a hash-house waitress in Chinatown, she was willing to keep company with Yow, a repulsive cook, as long as he supplied her with stolen lingerie. But when she aspired to his mistress' fine English bicycle, and police grabbed him at the point of delivery, Lilly fled in terror to Vancouver Island.

TEEN-AGE KILLERS' PROBLEMS STUDIED

Four nights after her arrival in the town of Nanaimo she went home with Ranny Griffiths, a miner, because it seemed the easiest thing to do. But with the approach of her baby came a sudden, desperate yearning for respectability. For the first time, she became dissatisfied with her life. She wanted to be "like folks."

Accordingly, when she left Ranny (an arrangement acceptable to both parties) her talent for dissimulation assumed its finest flower. Lilly Waller was discarded in her place appeared "Mrs. Walter Hughes," a tall, young widow, bereaved before her baby Eleanor was born.

SANCTUARY IN COMOX

For 32 years thereafter Lilly dedicated herself, unyieldingly, to this quest for identity. For seven years with the kindly Butler couple at Comox her life was "nice, full and steady"; until one day she heard the village gossip describe her baby as "this maid's child."

This was a turning-point. Promptly Lilly resigned, leaving the perplexed Mrs. Butler to wonder whether the major had driven her off with a recurrence of an old libidinous mood.

As housekeeper of a mainland hospital, Lilly experienced a joy she had never known before: she and Eleanor had a home of their own, where there would be no nonsense about "maid's child." With a sympathetic matron, she found companionship and a growing awareness of beauty. And when Eleanor went away to the city, and contracted a good marriage, Lilly's years of vagrancy seemed only a dimly-remembered nightmare.

This idyll was shattered by the arrival at the hospital of Yow, the truculent and vindictive Chinese. Once again Lilly fled: this time to Toronto.

WITH MAGIC STROCKS

This, briefly, is "Lilly's Story." Mrs. Wilson tells it with infinite tenderness, wit and perception, and with great economy of words. In a few magic strokes, she is able to illuminate a mood or a life: a movement in a darkened hall; a child's-eye view of a fight between eagle, robin and snake; a first revelation of love to an unnoticed mother, as she watches her daughter greet her husband.

The result is a moving and eloquent saga in which the pale skidroad delinquent emerges at the last as a woman of noble, if not heroic, proportions.

"Lilly's Story," already published in England and Canada under the title "The Equations of Love," is a book that takes on added depth and power with each reading. It establishes Ethel Wilson as an important new North American talent; quite the most powerful force to come out of Canada since uranium.

Teen-Age Killers' Problems Studied

WHY DID THEY KILL, by John Barlow Martin, Ballantine Books, New York.

"A terrifying gap separates us from our children," is the conclusion New York crime reporter, Barlow Martin, reaches after probing into the murder of a nurse in Ann Arbor for no apparent reason.

Three teen-age boys from respectable families were arrested. The author spent weeks investigating what teenagers do and talk about and talked freely with two of the boys who received life sentences.

He finds fault with elders' understanding of adolescents who are under continued compulsion to do something daring and thrilling.

Authors Tell Vivid History Of Aviation

"Ceiling Unlimited" by Lloyd and Kendall Smith, 403 pp., Macmillan, $7.25.

The story of American aviation from Kitty Hawk to super-sonics, covering half a century of flying history, is vividly told by the two authors, who have collaborated on many subjects.

The book is illustrated by many fine photographs. It starts with the story of the Wright brothers, Orville and Wilbur, and the first sustained power flights made by them at Kitty Hawk, N.C.

Developments in planes from that date, 1903, to 1953, are traced. The publishers are justified in claiming it is history compounded of pride, passion, fanaticism, courage, hard-headed realism and visionary genius. To say it is "characteristically American," however, is carrying it too far, for equally as good material, from pioneer days of flying to the present day, could be compiled in several other countries.

The story of Lindbergh's solo flight across the Atlantic is dramatically presented. Glen Curtiss' exhibition flights in New York over the first flying field established in the United States, the U.S. government's first air mail route, Henry Ford's first airplane freight line, Byrd's trip over the north pole with Floyd Bennett as navigator, creation of the army air forces, the first faster-than-sound trip by Capt. Charles Yeager in his rocket-powered research plane are the many events dealt with as airplane history is reviewed from chugging experimental motors of the Wright brothers to the sky-streaking jets of today.—F.J.M.

NAIRNE ON STAMPS

A glance through the new Scott's catalogue shows numerous price changes in most of the more popular British colonial stamps.

A look at Canada, which takes first place with most local collectors, reveals a general upward trend, especially in 20th century issues. The early penny stamps, along with British Columbia, seem unchanged, however.

Here are some of the new prices for unused and used, with last year's valuations in brackets for comparison—1868 1c brown, $15 and $5 ($13.50); 2c, $13, $3 ($12, $2.50); 5c mint $25 ($20); 12½c, $12.50 ($10); 15c, 11½c, $12.50 ($10); 20c, $14 ($12.50); 25c, $15 ($12.50); 50c, $20 ($15); 100c, $35 ($25); 15c, $6 ($5); Geo. V, 2c coil perf. 12 horiz., $1.50 ($1); 1930 50c, $11 ($10); 1936 $1, $12.50 used ($8c).

BOOKLET PANES

Booklet panes show no change until the 1942 issue. The Capex 5c goes from 10c to 25c mint. 8c to 14c used, a well-merited rise. On the other hand the jump to 16c in the case of the used 7c Capex is high, as it is a very common stamp. The 5c airmail of 1930 is up again $4, 2.75 ($3, $2.50). The air special deliveries are unchanged but the 20c special delivery of 1938 is now $1 and will probably go higher, as it had a short life—about three months.

In the officials the 2c war type is up to 40c mint or used. The famous 50c "OHMS" Lumbering keeps right on climbing at $10, $9 ($8.50 and $7). The $1 Ferry with "G" is away below market at $2.25, while the 10c Fur Industry is excessively priced at 25c and 12c.

KANGAROOS UP
The various $1 and $2 values of Australia of the Kangaroo type in unused condition have probably gone up more steadily than any other stamps in the world during the last 10 years, and are apparently still headed for higher levels. Bahamas Eleutherian jump from $16 to $21, but the Columbus set takes the only drop noticed so far, from $24 to $15. Of course, this has always sold below the former set as far as net price was concerned.

Indian mulberry wood bends easily and stands up well under strain, making it desirable in the manufacture of tennis rackets.

BOOK TALK

By JAMES SCOTT

A lot of things pick up in the fall besides books and not the least of these is the theatre. Even the movies are supposed to get better, or at least more releases are offered to the lovers of the cinema.

If the current offerings are any criterion, there is a discernible relation between the entertainment world and the book world. For example this week in Toronto you could see one play and three new movies based on the work of well-known authors.

New Play Society

The New Play Society (an eastern Canada pioneer in professional theatre) has opened its season with Mazo De La Roche's "Mistress of Jalna"—a play which has already had some success in Britain but this is its North American premiere.

It is not based on any single volume in the Whiteoaks saga, but, set late in the nineteenth century, centres around the indomitable grandmother, who, at that, was the most dramatic character of the whole lot.

Although Miss De La Roche has always protested that her house out on the shores of Lake Ontario is not the prototype for Jalna, it is perhaps significant that when the NPS had trouble finding precisely the right kind of furniture for a Jalna drawing room set, the author herself came to the rescue with pieces taken from her own elegant drawing-room. There's no question about it; her furniture shouts of what thousands of readers have always visualized as authentic Jalna.

And then there are the current flicks. They run from an amazing and rather dull monstrous 3-D production of Mickey Spillane's "I, the Jury," to the late Lloyd Douglas' "The Robe," with "The Cruel Sea" in between.

Helping Book Sales

Poking around the retail outlets recently, I discovered that it is now the unanimous opinion of booksellers that theatrical productions are a shot in the arm for book sales.

One large department store has a huge display of the standard reprint edition of "The Robe"—now selling at a lower price—and has more on order. Even as I stood nearby watching the trading was brisk. Same goes for "The Cruel Sea" which, very likely, will outsell Monsarrat's latest, "The Story of Esther Costello," this season. Even understand that Signet books are doing a rushing business with "I, the Jury" which, at best, I would say, is a very doubtful blessing except, of course, to Mr. Spillane and the aforementioned Signet books.

Hope "The Mistress of Jalna" will have a similar effect on Mazo De La Roche's new "The Whiteoak Brothers" which should be available in a couple of months.

THIS AMAZING PROVINCE

Acres of Cannon Balls

After Fire and Earthquake

What would your thoughts be if while walking along a mountain slope high above Okanagan Lake you found a number of perfectly round balls ranging in size from a baseball to a large cantaloupe?

These heavy "stones" are embedded to various degrees in a ground surface of fine rock chips.

Some of them Lyons lose their balance and roll down the hill to drop by the edge of the nearby highway.

Here the more observant tourist spies them and is quick to take one home as a curiosity. Speculation ranges widely as to their origin. Some imaginative persons have even tried to link them up with some by-gone noisy argument between a naval boat and hostile Indians on the side-hill. Certainly the weight, size, and spherical form suggest the term "cannonball" as the best description for them.

Actually the noise and violence that accompanied their formation would have made "small potatoes" out of even a present-day naval battle. The scene was set many thousands of years ago when this province was being tortured and twisted by a cataclysm of fire and earthquake. Great lava flows bubbled and hissed their unrelenting way down the mountain sides in a fury beyond description. At one particular place in the molten mass, conditions were such that small pieces of lava were thrown in the air in just the same fashion as hot grease spitting and crackling in a frying pan.

According to some carefully postulated law of science any molten or liquid material forms a spherical globe when traveling through the air. Since this law applied even then as now, the chunks of flying lava shaped themselves like cannonballs.

Unloved George IV Humanized

THE GREAT CORINTHIAN by Doris Lee, Oxford Press

"I look through all his life, and recognize but a bow and a grin," Thackeray wrote of George IV a century ago.

Since then, historians have tended to agree that George IV was perhaps the least admirable monarch Britain ever had.

Still, more than 120 years after his death, people write about him and read about him—his early brilliance, his good looks, his charming disposition when he wanted to be charming, his extravagance, his vanity, his casual cutting of his most intimate women and men friends.

The latest book on George IV is an excellent one.

Miss Lee, a British novelist and biographer, makes no attempt to gloss over George's faults. She is content, in her romanticized story, to make him a very human being and to try to show what made him the way he was. Her story combines the interest of a novel with the factual treatment of history.

ART in REVIEW

By COLIN GRAHAM

Gruber

The Alaskans are reputedly as friendly a lot of frontier people as one could hope to find. They also seem to be a good deal smarter, business-wise, than hinterland folk are generally supposed to be.

For although Alaska is far out on the fringe of the totem pole area, with relatively little Indian art to show in comparison with the coastal areas of B.C., Alaskans have made the most of what they have. Carefully they have preserved whatever Indian art they have found, and they have treated it well. As a result, Alaska has some magnificent work to show the visitor, and understandably is not averse to using it as a tourist magnet.

"TOTEM PROVINCE"
 To judge from our own tourist folders, we British Columbians have definitely embarked on a policy of publicizing this part of Canada as the "Totem Province." If sensibly we wish to bring visitors here by pointing out our uniqueness as the cradle area of northwest Indian art, why shouldn't we?

But before beating the propaganda drums too loudly, should we not look around us to see if we are doing anything to preserve the very art we are boasting to the world about? For the existence of Thunderbird Park, and for the poles in Stanley Park and at the University of B.C. let us be grateful—especially to the men through whose foresight they now stand there.

IN DESERTED VILLAGES
 But what of the scores of poles this very moment silently rotting in the mainly deserted Indian villages to our north? Many have already decayed beyond hope of recovery. The rest, with the consent of the Indians, can be salvaged either in whole or in part. Twenty years from now, if we do nothing about them, they will virtually all be gone.

We have been amply warned of this situation by Wilson Duff of the Provincial Museum, who recently returned from an exploratory survey of these villages.

The question is, then, will our provincial government now set aside the funds necessary for the salvage of this marvelous heritage while there is still time?

A few thousands are needed but, frankly, a million would be a trifle to spend for the privilege of handing on to our descendants an art which, by common world consent, is as great or greater than anything the white man has yet created during his relatively brief sojourn on this continent.

GRUBER CONDUCTS

8 Concerts to Show Greater Repertoire

We want to tell you more today of the result of our careful planning for the programs to be heard in the course of the eight-concert series, opening Oct. 5.

Nearly every concert will contain one work which had already been attempted in the past by our orchestra, but each concert will see a continued expansion of the orchestra's repertoire.

For the first concert, the "Unfinished" Symphony by Schubert comes under the former heading, and checking back over our records, we find that the "Unfinished" Symphony was heard here last almost exactly five years ago, which happened to be at the very first concert at which I officiated here in Victoria.

We hope that we can approach today the re-studying of the "Unfinished" with a slightly greater awareness of what is involved.

GUEST ARTISTS
 Of guest artists we have invited three pianists, who will each play new (for Victoria) concertos at the respective concerts assigned to them; Robin Wood will be the first of these, on November 17, and will play the first concerto by Chopin.

Randolph Hokanson, who will be remembered here for his exemplary account of Beethoven's G-major piano concertos a few years ago, will re-visit us in January, when he will be responsible for the solo part in the first concerto by Brahms, as part of an all-Brahms concert.

One of the most brilliant of younger Canadian pianists will appear with us in February, John Knight. He has been assigned the solo parts in two works for piano and orchestra, namely the Gershwin Rhapsody in Blue, and the Grieg A-minor concerto. So much for pianists.

Clifford Evans will leave his customary first chair for the December concert, in order to assume the solo part in the Beethoven violin concerto; he will resume his customary post after the intermission, for the balance of this all-Beethoven concert, which will be taken up by the greatest of all orchestral symphonies, the "Eroica." Later in the season the orchestra's principal clarinet, Stanley McCartney, will be soloist in the Mozart A-major concerto for clarinet and orchestra.

HIGHLIGHT OF SEASON
 When we heard that the choral society had set itself the giant task of preparing the B-minor Mass by Bach, we did not hesitate in our conviction that this could constitute the highlight of this season's programs; thus the seventh concert next March will be devoted entirely to the performance of this monumental masterpiece for chorus, orchestra and vocal soloists, under the direction of Graham Steed.

This will be the first time that the B-minor Mass will be heard here in its entirety and in its complete original form. Some pride is felt in the fact that this work can now be scheduled, as it is a measure for the degree of musical maturity to which Victoria has attained.

Major Work By Symphony

Major work to be performed by Victoria Symphony orchestra under baton of musical director Hans Gruber, at first concert, October 5, is the beautiful vital work of Robert Schumann, the Symphony No. 1 in B flat, known as the "Spring" Symphony. In the first section of the program will be:
 Rossini (overture to "Cenerentola"), Schubert (symphony in B minor, unfinished) and Scarlatti - Tommasini (ballet suite: "The Good-Humored Ladies.")

AT TOTEM THEATRE
 On the professional side, Totem Theatre will open Monday with a presentation of the beautiful, effective play by Tennessee Williams, "The Glass Menagerie."

This will provide an opportunity for the public to see another side of Totem's character, for it is again different to anything they have staged locally to date. The tender story is told in an unconventional way, as a memory play and calls for some extraordinary stage and mood lighting effects.

Sam Payne, outstanding star of "Gaslight" and "Chiltern Hundreds," which ends tonight, directs this haunting piece, with Norma Macmillan and Verlie Cooter in lead roles.

There will be no public sale of tickets for Monday night, as Thor Arngim and Stuart Baker are giving the opening night to workers and officials of the Community Chest campaign in keeping with their policy that Totem theatre should become an integral part of the city and community life.

Canada's fresh-water areas constitute more than six per cent of the total area of 3,845,000 square miles.

The Record Shop

By RICHARD KLEINER

Problem: How to re-create the exact tone of a band that hasn't played for ten years.

That's the job that faced Joseph Gershenson, music head at Universal-International Studios. The band in question was Glenn Miller's, and the cause of the whole thing was a movie, "The Glenn Miller Story."

Gershenson says that the tone of the bands—such as Tex Beneke's—which took over after Miller's death—weren't exactly like the real thing.

"Something was lacking," he says. "Finally, I took home a batch of original Miller records and played them continuously over a week-end. I almost drove my wife crazy, but I discovered that Glenn had a delicate balance between his reed and brass sections that nobody else had duplicated."

Gershenson, himself an old-time orchestra leader, says the tone in the movie will be just right. The movie band, including some ex-Miller men and others like Louis Armstrong and Gene Krupa, will play 28 Miller classics—"Moonlight Serenade," "Tuxedo Junction," "In the Mood," "String of Pearls" and all the other great ones. James Stewart will play Miller, but somebody else will play the trombone.

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER, Sports Editor

And so the Shamrocks go into hibernation for the winter, recounting the past and looking to the future.

The final game of the boxla season wasn't even history when someone pulled the switch that started the mechanics of making ice, and today flashing blades are singing where the soft-shoe shuffle for the Mann Cup ended Wednesday.

It's hockey time again in the old corral, and the puck fiends are grabbing for the straw that lay bent and broken under a last-placed finish this spring.

There's a tremendous interest in the game, and in the Cougars. And the fans are renewing their faith in the club with a box-office surge that obviously reflects the mid-summer efforts of owner Lester Patrick and the parent Canadiens to outlive the past.

This is the year of "new deal," and the cards are stacked in the Cougars' favor right now.

The first shuffle saw Lester cut a pair of aces in Sam (or Sylvio, as you like) Bettio and Pennti Lund, and the stakes were high at the time. These are pair of veterans who should help as their professional records weren't compiled in a house league.

Canadiens to Keep the Pot Filled

Then the Montreal Canadiens sat in on the game. They offered Billy Reay as the house man and the Cougars jumped at the opportunity. For two years or more, the contract says, Billy will spin the wheel of fate.

But Billy knew of his possible troubles and asked for a couple of con men. The Habs responded by flooding the roster with the brightest of the younger element at their beck and call.

And now just to make certain that the house will get its rightful percentage, the Habs have sent their trouble shooter Frank Carlin west to oversee the preparation for the gala opening.

That, neighbors, means that the Montreal Canadiens have designated the Cougars as their number one farm team this year and that in Reay they believe they have the man to prove it. The Cougars are expected to fill in the holes and two of the big gaps are already plugged with Bettio and Lund.

Reay Won't Crack the Nut, Not Yet

Basically, this is the Cougar hockey club as now constituted—the cream of last year's local crop, a new coach highly regarded by those who can help him most, two veterans who have always earned their keep, eager youngsters who haven't suffered the pains of remorse that go with their profession, and a tried and tested goalkeeper in Ralph Almas who has never had any difficulty in securing profitable employment in the past.

Still, you don't win games that count in the tub-thumping circuit. And that's probably why Reay wisely refuses to get in on the act until the Cougars start firing real bullets come Tuesday, Oct. 6.

The new mentor is quietly evaluating the talent at his disposal and if his manner is the criterion of his policy, the Cougars will know who's boss soon enough.

And while some boxla fans readily admit they deserve a wrist-slapping of the lit temper they displayed Wednesday night, others are boiling.

In defense, they say the true meaning of the chorus of boos that greeted Canadian Lacrosse President Jim McLeod when he first attempted to present the trophy to the Peterborough club hasn't been explained.

Briefly, their first complaint is that, indirectly or otherwise, the threat of the Petes not to take the floor if Gordy Folka officiated again following Friday's controversial third game, intimidated the CLA to the extent of catering to the Trailermen, as Folka was not named for any subsequent game.

Secondly, it is intimated, and the opinion in itself is commendable, that fans in the west feel their sports morals are higher than those in the east. And the fact that Peterborough's ethics in the series were considerably lower than those exhibited by the Shamrocks caused this pent-up feeling to explode against the one official the fans believed responsible for such a divergence of playing ethics and the over-all childish conduct of the Petes.

And so we leave lacrosse with the thought that if the fans who responded to defense of their sportsmanship, and also those who apologized for the outburst, are an example of what the future has in store for the game, then the game has little to fear.

Valliere Gets Ice Post

Ross Valliere, Western Hockey League linesman last season, has been secured as referee-in-chief of the Victoria Commercial Hockey League this season.

Valliere will chose his staff of officials from Bill Hatcher, Curly Purdy, Bert Nelson, Frank Warshawski, and candidates at a referee's school which will be conducted by the league prior to the October 14 opener.

Anyone interested in joining the school is asked to contact Bill Oliver at G 4770.

The three city entries will begin their two-week pre-season practice session Monday at the Memorial Arena. Navy will work out during the afternoon, while Victoria Merchants and Individual Cleaners will scrimmage at night.

THE OLD COUNTRY SOCCER SCENE

'Throstles' Loom as Title Threat

Most Old Country football teams have played a quarter of their scheduled league games and observers have now had the opportunity to ascertain the strength of the various teams and make intelligent comment on their records to date.

This week it may prove interesting to discuss the league standings and some of the various reasons for the positions of the front-runners and also the teams wallowing in the depths of their respective divisions.

In England's Division One, West Bromwich Albion are again at the top of the league table, a position they occupied for a long time in 1952-53 only to be beaten out by Arsenal and Preston North End toward the end of the campaign. It is worthy of note that they still retain intact last season's half-back line comprised of Barlow, Griffin and Nicholls, and would appear to suggest that if these players can keep up their excellent play the "Throstles" will again prove serious contenders for the championship.

The outstanding achievement in the premier division is that of Huddersfield Town, who were promoted from Division Two last year and who are now occupying the exalted runner-up spot after a fine record of six wins, two ties and two defeats from their first 10 games. Again it is significant that their complete defense from goalkeeper, full-backs and half-backs who had played in every league game last term and up to the time of writing have participated in all games in the cur-

Exhibition At Nanaimo Set Tonight

With 10 new faces, including the confident countenance of new playing-coach Bill Reay, the 1953-54 Victoria Cougars are scheduled to come home to roost today.

Reay broke training camp in Seattle Friday night and the Cougars were slated to arrive in town today.

They travel to Nanaimo tonight to meet Seattle Bombers in an exhibition game at Nanaimo Civic Arena. Bombers meet the Cats here in a return clash Friday night, October 2.

However, the big event of the Cougars pre-season calendar is the exhibition game with New York Rangers at Memorial Arena Tuesday night.

The Rangers, coached and managed by Frank Boucher, will bring with them some of the greatest names in the National Hockey League including dynamic Max Bentley, tiny Wally Hergeshiemer, Hy Buller, Leo Reise, and Allen Stanley, not to forget Ivan Irwin, darling of Cougar fans last year.

Cougars open their WHL season in Vancouver October 6 against Art Chapman's Canucks. First home game of the season is at Memorial Arena October 9 against New Westminster Royals.

SCRIMMAGE SUNDAY

Not sparing the horses one iota, Reay has scheduled a Sunday morning practice at the arena as he continues a strenuous program to get his club whipped into top shape for their league opener.

Local fans will have the opportunity of seeing the Cougars twice this week-end, tonight at Nanaimo (game-time is 9) and Sunday morning at the scrimmage session which starts at 11.

There have been no new player developments since Friday which means that the Cougars will probably not have Stan Long or Bob Fryday this year. Long is still a question mark as a result of the serious leg injury incurred last season while Fryday has not yet shown any inclination to report to the Victoria club.

FORWARD COMBINATIONS

Reay will likely have three forward lines working for the exhibition games. He himself has been pivoting Stan Maxwell and Bill Sennett with Sennett also working with Eddie Dorohoy and Gordie Cowan. Wings Colin Kilburn and Andy Heberton have been flanking Gene Achtymichuk with Reg Abbott centring Sam Bettio and Pennti Lund.

Local Rider Shows Well In Road Race

Seventeen-year-old Mal Potts is making a good showing in a three-day cycle race from Vancouver to Penticton.

Potts, local junior rider, placed seventh in a field of 26 competitors when riding concluded the first day, Friday, at Hope. He came in six lengths back of leader Jim Davis of Vancouver.

Lorne Atkinson, Vancouver, and Tony Bacetta, New Westminster, took second and third place respectively.

The race was scheduled to continue to Princeton today and conclude at Penticton Sunday.

Close Races Feature Both Leagues

By FRED DOWN
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Two of the closest finishes to the batting races in 20 years shaped up today as Al Rosen closed in on Mickey Vernon in the American League and Al (Red) Schoendienst made a last, desperate bid to overtake Carl Furillo in the National League.

Rosen, shifted to lead-off man by Cleveland manager Al Lopez in order to get as many official trips to the plate as possible, collected four hits in six trips as the Indians routed the Tigers, 12-3, last night and thereby raised his average to .332—only one point behind Vernon, who was shut out by Marion Fricano.

Schoendienst, meanwhile, also collected four hits in six tries as the Cardinals routed the Cubs, 11-2, and upped his average to .342. The injured Furillo, idle for the last three weeks, still holds the lead but his .344 figure looks more insecure every time Schoendienst steps to the plate.

The race in the American League is the closest since 1945 when George Stirmweiss and Tony Cucinello battled it out to the last day. The current race in the National League recalls the 1931 season in which Chick Hafey of the Cardinals beat out Bill Terry of the Giants, .349 to .348.

Rosen, who finishes the season against Detroit pitching, hit two homers last night to take over the AL lead with .43 and he has the runs-batted-in crown wrapped up with a 144 total. A final push in the averages can make him the first American League since Ted Williams' mid-1940's heyday to win the triple crown.

Three pitchers, meanwhile, shared the spotlight in Friday's games.

Rookie Harvey Haddix notched his 20th victory for the Cardinals, limiting the Cubs to seven hits and benefitting from a 19-hit attack that included homers by Stan Musial and Solly Hemus. Musial, continuing his late-season surge, had two hits in four trips and lifted his average to .336.

NINTH SHUTOUT

Washington's Bob Porterfield hurled his ninth shutout and 22nd victory of the season as Wayne Terwilliger delivered the winning run with a ninth-inning single. Porterfield's shutout total is the highest by an American League pitcher since Bob Lemon had ten in 1948 and his victory total is the highest by a Washington pitcher since 1933 when Alvin Crowder won 24.

Mel Parnell, scoring his 21st victory of the year, shut out the Yankees for the fourth time, 5-0, and thereby equalled a record established by the great Walter Johnson in 1908.

THREE B.C. TITLES

City Minor Boxla Clubs Set Record

Although Victoria Shamrocks lost the Mann Cup series this season all was not lost. Three minor lacrosse teams brought championship titles to the city. Victoria Pee Wee All-Stars, Juvenile B All-Stars and Oak Bay bantams each won the British Columbia title in their respective divisions by defeating mainland teams in sudden-death contests.

Victory for these three clubs marked the first time in the history of the Greater Victoria Lacrosse Association that three provincial titles have been brought to the city by minor league teams.

The Pee Wee All-Stars gave a gritty display when they edged North Burnaby Beavers, 5-4, in the second period of overtime to capture the title and conclude a 33-game winning streak by the mainland team. Juvenile B All-Stars clipped West Coast Cartage, 4-1, to annex their title, while Oak Bay whipped Vancouver, 10-2.

Uplands Golf

Mrs. A. R. Roberts defeated Mrs. R. L. Pocock, 3 and 2, to capture the B section of women's day competition at Uplands Golf Club Friday.

Mrs. P. J. Ferguson won the consolation round by downing Miss M. Milburn, 4 and 3.

Trundlers Run Hot As Pin Season Opens

By RON COULTER

League bowling got under way on most alleys this week and a few keggers ushered in the season with a bang.

Andy Palmer hit mid-season form and stole the spotlight in Gibson's Bowladrome. Senior Tenpin League when he trundled his way to single games of 211, 182 and 211 for high-three total of 604.

Bob Turner added a 590 score and H. Hawkins hit for a 582 total. Turner fired high single game of 215 while Len Murrant, 212, and Jack Leatham with 201 posted other high singletons.

Johnston's swept three games from Toggerly Shop to take sole possession of first-place. Gorge Hotel turned in high team single of 989 and top three with 2,624.

At Strathcona alleys, Dorman's Men's Wear, Olson's and Kamann's all took three games and tied for first place on opening night. Dorman's tallied top single game of 871 and added high three at 2,426.

Roy Bezz racked up leading single of 212 and high total at 556. Bon McArthur added a 528 triple while Ray Oberg with 206 and Harry Moulton at 201 hit for other top singletons.

In the Strathcona Women's Tenpin League, Tillicum Athletic Club leads in team standings after two weeks with six wins and no losses.

Edna Profit is the most consistent trundler and tops the average parade with a 165 mark, followed by Iris Murrant at 157. Mamie Worth hit for high three of 502 and top single of 187 this week.

Tillicum claimed high team three of 2,265 and top one-game score, 308.

Climbers are in sole possession of first place in the Capital City Major Fivepin League. Reg Waggoner put together single games of 333, 294 and 371 to rack up high three of 998, followed by Bob Elliott, 750; Dave Doolittle, 746; Wilf Smith, 740; Eric Marshall, 718, and T. Newbegin with 701. Bob McLeod rolled a 329 single.

Bruce Robinson led the Singles Classic with a 784 three-game score.

In the men's league Eric Chayko sniped top single of 337, while Ken Smith rolled high three of 800.

Bill McKinnon rolled a 353 single and 839 triple to pace the mixed league.

Pearce to Coach Fifth Regiment

Officials of the Fifth Regiment, intermediate soccer team, have announced their search for a coach has been successful.

Al Pearce, veteran player, coach and referee, has taken over the reins of the team and will be with them Sunday when they meet Eagles at upper Beacon Hill Park at 1.

Winter Sport Likely to Affect Times Amateur Athlete Selection

The Times Athlete of the Year contest enters a new chapter this week-end with the end of summer sports and the beginning of winter sports activity.

Completion of the Mann Cup lacrosse series heralded the end of summer sports while this week-end, soccer and Canadian football will enter the picture, hockey beginning Tuesday night. Naturally, commencement of winter sports will bring with them a new list of candidates for the Times' award.

With approximately one-third of the trophy year over—the contest started in June—Whitey Severson, the leader since the first week, holds a slim 56-vote lead over Joe Travis.

Severson, captain of the Victoria Shamrocks, consistently managed to stay just ahead of Travis in the weekly balloting even though Travis fans boosted him although he was never seen in action—his forte being soccer.

But now that soccer is getting under way, it is quite conceivable that Travis could overhaul the popular Severson and make the race even closer.

For his untiring efforts in the Mann Cup finals, Severson's fans gave him one of his biggest weeks-in balloting since the beginning of the contest.

While Severson will still be eligible for the yearly award, he will not be able to win any more monthly awards unless he takes part in a winter sport. By the same token Travis was the leader several weeks during the summer but as he was being recognized for his winter soccer achievements, was not eligible for a monthly cup.

It is also possible that winter sports—soccer, amateur hockey, basketball, Canadian football and rugby—will bring out a new challenger to the leaders, someone who has been inactive during the summer but who will be in the limelight during the winter months. Names like Johnny Clark of basketball, Rookie Wright of soccer, Norm LaCree of hockey and Ken Higgs of Canadian football may soon be mentioned with those of Severson and Travis.

This is possible as it is the fans of Victoria who make the selections. The ballot that accompanies this story is the instrument to decide who is the top amateur athlete of the year. Clip it today, fill it in and send it to the Victoria Daily Times sports department.

Anyone for Tennis, Hmmm?

Play in the Victoria Table Tennis Association opens on three fronts next week and no players are more eager to get under way than Nancy Craig, left; Betty Yardley, centre, and Doreen Evans. Mrs. Craig is one of the top-players in the province and last year won the local club tourney, the city championship, Vancouver city championship, B.C. title and the Western Canada championship.

Table Tennis Group Expects Banner Year

Enthusiastic table tennis artists are walking downtown streets today with a pleasant gleam in their eyes.

Cause for the ocular change can be directly attributable to the fact that play in the Victoria Table Tennis Association is scheduled to open Monday night at the Club Sirocco in what appears to be shaping up as a banner season.

Last year the association had a total of 90 members. This year a membership of over 100 is anticipated.

Monday night the eight-team senior A league is slated to move into action. Tuesday the senior B league takes over with a special invitation for beginners to join being extended.

Wednesday night the top 16 players in the organization compete in the Challenge League. This section is formed to develop players for tourney play and entry will be gained by challenging any of the top players to a best-of-three match.

The three Ngai brothers, Art, Eddie and Charlie will be in the challenge division, as will club president Lawrie Greenwood, Keith Olson, Wayne Chew, Nancy Craig and Gordon Chay, a newcomer to the local scene from Hong Kong.

Club facilities are available for use every night of the week end and Sundays.

You Only Get What You Pay For

It happened a bit sooner than anticipated but several readers have written to ask what is considered a fair price for a beginner to pay for a badminton racquet, and whether it is good policy to buy second-hand material. I don't know what is meant by "fair price," but this is what happened to me the year I was converted.

I spent some considerable time mooching around second-hand stores, antique shops and junk piles looking for the absolute cheapest buy in racquets. What was the use of buying a good one, I asked myself. I'd never played the game so anything would do until I found out whether or not I liked it.

Well, I ended up with something that came out of the ark. It cost me $2.25—with press. Eager beaver that I was, I was the first on the court at the beginning of the season to try it out. I was also the first off. The first bird I hit broke two strings, the second demolished the rest in a cloud of dust.

The frame's still good, I reasoned; it would still be cheaper to have a new stringing job than pay for a new weapon. The lowest cost outfit was duly inserted (about $4.00 with tax and trimmings) and I was able to rejoin the lads and lassies on the court again. All was well for about a week until some well-meaning enthusiast pointed out that my warped racquet was probably the reason I couldn't keep the bird in the arena. Close inspection revealed convolutions that were more ordinarily associated with the mighty oceans. The frame, of course, was rotten and the nice taut stringing job (not hanging like the stringing in a lacrosse stick) had had the time of its life. My mentor at that time, Jack Parker, I believe, shattered my dreams of economy with the suggestion that I purchase a new racquet. Which I did. And that is what I now recommend to any would-be "badmintoner." My experience cost me the price of two new badminton racquets, so be warned.

The "fair price" business is always a sticker. It depends on many unknown (to this writer, anyway) quantities, including the degree of enthusiasm possessed by the neophyte and that not so little thing like availability of dollars.

Obviously, if, speaking in the local idiom, you're loaded, then by all means buy the best which means you will shell out between $20 and $30. If you're in my class you'll be looking for something between $5 and $10. Several sports dealers in this town have informed me that for ten smackers you can get a slightly better-than-average racquet which will stay the course.

It might be a good suggestion to the beginner that on the night of registration he ask the secretary of the club if he knows anyone with second-hand equipment for sale. It is more than likely that he will be lucky. If not, buy a new one.

Next week the badminton season will officially be "in." That gives you seven days, boys and girls, to sharpen up your wits on the rule books, forget that there ever existed a game called tennis—and start digging a butter knife into the piggy bank.

Gordon Pirie Looms as New Threat For Middle Distance Track Honors

BY ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer
LONDON (CP)—A six-foot, two-inch athlete with an eight-foot running stride and a penchant for breakfast of honey and peanut butter has come into his own here this summer.

The name is Gordon Pirie, a 22-year-old middle distance runner who flopped at the Olympics last year. He's rebounded this season with a world record mark in the six-mile event and a time of 4:48 in a mile competition that the experts reckoned he'd entered for exercise.

Britons figure he may develop into the world's greatest.

The tall bank clerk is a hard-driving competitor with stamina and speed, whose remarkable zeal leads him through an average of 120 training miles a week. In the off-season, he may run 140 miles, or more than a mile for every pound he weighs. He's only 134 pounds.

Barring accidents, Pirie is headed straight for a showdown with Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia, triple Olympic champion with a competitive range wider even than his own.

Both are after the 5,000 metres crown held since 1942 by Sweden's Gunda Haegg with a time of 13:58.2. If training means anything, the narrow-chested Pirie may get there first. He exceeded Zatopek's best time in a recent German meet and was within four seconds of Haegg's time.

Up early, he breakfasts on high-energy fare, tosses down two glasses of milk at a morning break and eats lunch at a restaurant where "they give me double helpings." Work over, Pirie knocks off a long practice run and is in bed by 9:30 p.m. after a big dinner.

His diversions are few. Movies he considers "too stuffy." He has several girlfriends but these, if they conform to his own relaxation standards, have to be on the athletic side, too. After running his "surprise" mile, he walked 15 miles in the country with a girl the next day.

WRITER'S ANALYSIS
The stringy runner's physical measurements sent Chapman Pincher of the Daily Express digging into the physiology of it all. Pincher reported that scientists credit Pirie's sparseness, his motive power and his fuel supply system, with his success.

He's literally big hearted and his lungs can take in more oxygen than the barrel-chested but muscle-bound individual. His fat-free muscles throw off waste products better than do most persons' and his blood stream probably can dole out as much as nine times the energy fuel the average body requires at rest. Most people's energy supply is increased only three times by exertion.

Zatopek has been quoted in London newspapers as being suitably impressed with Pirie's performances, especially in the mile victory he scored over the highly-regarded American, Wes Santee. But the Czech also has been quoted as saying that Pirie will burn himself out by his strenuous training methods.

The two probably will meet again competitively at the European championships in Switzerland next summer, where Pirie will be anxious to wipe out the defeat Zatopek pinned on him at the Olympics.

Both are probabilities for the 5,000 and 10,000 metres, equivalent to the three and six mile events. Zatopek won both at the Olympics, along with the marathon.

Marciano Must Rate Near All-Time Greats

NEW YORK (AP)—We all know a little more about Rocky Marciano than we did, and it will be some time before anyone again screws up the nerve to pick against the world's heavyweight champion—maybe four or five years.

Some are saying that the job he did on Roland LaStarza while scoring his 44th straight victory and his 40th knockout does not yet entitle the Brockton bruiser to be mentioned in the same breath with the great masters of the craft.

It was, in this book, a superb demonstration of sheer fistic brutality. LaStarza was, and is, a rugged and very courageous young fighting man, almost surely the second-best in the world today. And yet, try as he did with every weapon he possessed, he could not survive against the steady onslaught of the champion.

Whether Marciano is, as his manager, Al Weill, insists, the greatest one-punch fighter the game has seen is, of course, open to a great deal of argument. He did not stop LaStarza with a single blow or even seriously hurt him with one wallop, but the cumulative effect of the scores of hooks and full swings that thudded off the collegian's head and body was deadly.

The truth is that the one-punch knockout is a pretty mythical thing. Joe Louis, perhaps as lethal a puncher as the Rock, scored his knockouts with a flurry of lefts and rights. In any comparison of Marciano and Louis, there are these qualities to be taken into consideration. Rocky takes a better punch than the destroyer did, and almost surely has more endurance. Louis hit in faster combinations and could tear an opponent apart quicker, once he had him hurt, than Marciano can. They would have made a fight to see, and we'll let you name the winner.

A select few of the ringside critics said the Rock used dirty tactics against LaStarza, butting him, hitting low and hitting after the break. They exaggerated both the intent and the effect. Marciano did none of these things on purpose and it isn't in his nature.

Some are wondering how LaStarza was able to absorb so many of Rocky's Sunday punches before wilting when it took only two of them to blast Joe Walcott to the floor in Chicago last spring. One answer is that Marciano says he never did catch Roland quite as squarely, as perfectly, as he did the former champion.

Another might be that Walcott already had a $250,000 guarantee as good as banked for his fight and had no particular reason for taking the bad beating he must have realized was inevitable.

BASEBALL MEMORIES

When Babe Hit No. 60

By GALE TALBOT
NEW YORK (AP)—It was the next to the last game of the year for New York Yankees that first day of October, 1927.

They had scored 108 victories and were a mile in front. Yet 10,000 fans had paid their way into Yankee Stadium on the chance that they would see a burly young fellow named George Herman Babe Ruth break his own record of 59 homers set six years before.

Left-hander Tom Zachary, one of the best of the era, was Washington's choice to halt the Babe short of his goal. Tom bore down grimly, not wishing the distinction of serving up the record pitch.

So carefully did he work that the Babe walked on his first trip to the plate. Each of the next two times he singled. Twice the great man scored, and when he pigeon-toed to the plate in the last of the eighth the count was tied at 2-2. Shortstop Mark

Koenig was on third, having tripled.

The Babe swung viciously at Zachary's first pitch, and missed. The second was a ball. The third was a smoking fast ball, low and inside. The resultant "whack" was heard throughout the park, and the crowd rose in thunderous acclaim as the ball streaked almost on a line for the seats in the right-field bleachers.

It passed about 10 feet inside the foul pole, landing halfway up the stands, and the Babe had his 60th homer.

As the Babe trotted around, spiking each bag carefully, Zachary flung his glove to the ground and looked toward his teammates for some sign of consolation. He found none.

The applause from the crowd continued to the end of the inning and swelled anew as the moon-faced slugger trotted out to his place in right field, giving a snappy military salute every few steps.

Gardens and Home Building

Victoria Daily Times SATURDAY, SEPT. 26, 1953 11

JACK BEASTALL SAYS

September Calls For Planning

Anything which can be done now to assist next month's work is well worth doing.

In most gardens the end of September is an in-between time. Some of the summer plants are hardy ready to be cut down, while the fall flowers are at their best. We therefore find ourselves looking for something to do. A handful of stakes, a small axe, and a black pencil can be put to good use at this time. We can wander around the garden and mark the places for our new plants, those which were previously ordered and will be delivered from the nursery next month.

As soon as the stakes have been driven to show the position of each plant and group of bulbs, we can start preparation of the soil.

In some gardens the soil may be hard and dry, or it may be of a sandy structure. Either condition calls for the thorough incorporation of organic material, otherwise known as well rotted manure or its substitute, compost.

SLOW SOAKING

On a hard soil, watering will be the first requirement, and nothing can take the place of it. A trickling hose or a soil soaker does the kind of a job needed at planting time, and also leaves the surrounding soil dry enough for walking on. It will require from five to seven days after watering before a heavy soil can be dug, and the organic matter added, and it is better to wait an extra day or so, than spoil the texture of the soil. Where sand predominates the organic matter should be added immediately, and be followed by the thorough soaking.

Hardpan near the surface is often encountered. This requires breaking up for at least a full depth of the spade, and a generous amount of organic matter thoroughly incorporated.

BONE MEAL FOR FALL

At the time of planting in the fall there is only one fertilizer to be used, and that is bone meal. Bone meal is in the organic class and is not immediately available as plant food. It has to be broken down by soil organisms and soil acids over a period of time, and while a small percentage of immediately usable salts will assist in establishing the plants, the main food supply will not be released until spring.

Bone meal may be mixed directly into the soil within the planting hole because it has no burning action on tender roots. It can be used just as effectively with bulbs, a scattering being mixed with the soil in each hole, or a quantity applied to each bulb bed at a level where the roots will extend. The amount to be used is not critical and will vary from a tablespoonful for a single bulb to two or three large handfuls for a shrub.

CARE WITH PEAT MOSS

Many gardeners will be using peat moss for mixing in the planting holes. Peat moss can be very beneficial, but it can also cause the death of a plant if not used correctly. When well mixed with the soil which will surround the roots of the plant, in a proportion of about one part peat moss to three parts soil, it will hold moisture and encourage root growth. But when a quantity of dry peat is thrown into the hole so as to form a barrier between roots and soil, the plant has no chance of reaching food or moisture before its reserves are exhausted.

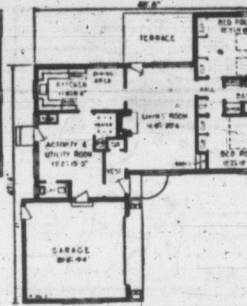

The foregoing are just general remarks on successful planting. The exact work to be done will depend on the conditions in each garden, but any preparatory work which can be done to eliminate delay in planting when the new stock arrives, will be of benefit to both gardener and plants.

On clear days the Nova Scotia coast can be seen from Table Mountain in Newfoundland, 80 miles away and 1,300 feet high.

PLAN 1. WITH BASEMENT

PLAN 2. WITHOUT BASEMENT

This home, with two-car attached garage was laid out on the very popular "L" shape plan. The spacious living room faces both the front lawn and rear garden.

The activity and utility room is accessible from the kitchen or the front hall; it also has its own powder room. More than ample closet space is provided throughout the entire house. The large "U" shape kitchen includes a dining area, making a dining room unnecessary. (Loder Plans.)

QUESTION BOX

A row of sweet corn, planted in June, has only a few cobs formed. What is the cause of the small crop?

Poor pollination is the most likely cause. Corn is wind pollinated and should always be planted in a block and not in a single row. The block should be located so that the prevailing summer winds will carry the pollen over the majority of plants. Also overhead watering should not be done when the pollen is ripe.

The leaves of scarlet runner beans turned suddenly black and limp. Is this some disease?

If you are situated in a low area you likely experienced the first touch of frost on the night of Sept. 19.

In a garden I took over this year there are some pretty pink flowers which resemble small gladioli both in flower and leaf. Do these come from bulbs which should be dug and stored for winter?

This plant is Schizostylis coccinea (kafir lily) variety Mrs. Heggarty. It is a fleshy rooted member of the iris family and may be left in the ground over winter.

I have an Australian silk oak in a five-inch pot. It is 24 inches tall but has no branches. What can be done to induce bushiness?

The Australian silk oak (grevillea robusta) is a tree in its home environment and does not branch freely when small. However, some side shoots may be induced by pinching out the growing tip or cutting the plant back to a desired height.

Why should a camellia not be planted on the east side of a house where it can benefit from the early morning sun?

It is the early morning sun in late winter and early spring which damages or burns the buds and blossoms which are covered with frost after the low night temperatures. If planted on the west side, the plant is protected from the sun's rays until the air temperature is well above the frost point.

Where can I purchase seed of New Zealand spinach and bronze oak-leaf lettuce?

If this reader will forward name and address we can advise sources of supply by mail.

Ready-to-Use Sacked Concrete

At one time or other, most gardeners and home owners have needed a small mix of concrete.

It may have been for a step, a curb to hold soil in a bed, a few stepping stones, or a concrete base for a flagpole, clothes line pole, or a gate post. Whatever the purpose, many good ideas have been discarded because of the inconvenience of having to buy sand and gravel by the yard, and cement by the sack, knowing full well that most of it would be wasted.

A few days ago I discovered that we can buy a 90-pound bag of sand, gravel and cement already mixed.

As with the wife's pie crust and biscuit mixes, all we have to do is to add water and our small batch of concrete is ready.

And if we need a smooth finish, or have patching to do, there is another mixture of sand and cement only.

Wool was the first industrial enterprise in Lancashire, centred on Furness Abbey in the 12th century.

YOUR WEEK'S WORK

FLOWERS

Remove the last of the summer annuals and prepare space for planting all narcissi (daffodils) and other spring flowering bulbs as they become available.

Wallflowers and forget-me-nots should now be planted in final flowering locations.

Do all planting firmly to avoid heaving by frost and wind damage.

Rock plants purchased direct from pots may be planted now. Work over rock garden carefully and trim any untidy plants which have been neglected.

Replanting peony beds, or planting new roots, should be done within the next four weeks.

VEGETABLES

Prepare for frost in low-lying areas. Tomato vines may be pulled up and hung in basement or protected shed for ripening.

Clean up the planting of vegetables which have nearly finished producing, and sow cover crop on all vacant sections. Garden refuse should be composted. Burn only that which is of a woody nature or known to be diseased.

Order fruit trees and small fruits for planting next month.

Prepare for frost in low lying areas as the moon reaches full. Have material ready to cover squash vines, tomato plants, and similar tender vegetables. A degree or so of frost can do much damage.

Order fruit trees and shrubs, and prepare for planting them next month.

Clean up plantings of vegetables which are nearly finished production. Sow vacant spots to a cover crop.

SERBS

Order rose bushes, flowering shrubs and trees, ornamental evergreens, and prepare spaces for planting next month.

Abelia—Cut only old wood after flowering.

Cuttings of many shrubs may still be taken.

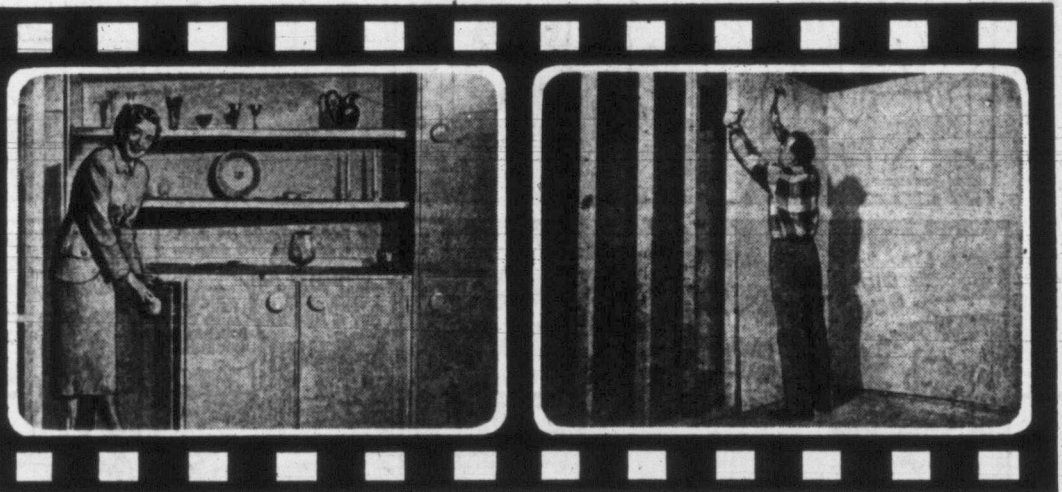

Yucca flower spikes should be removed when flowers fade. Laurel may be pruned to shape.

The town hall of Stratford-on-Avon, England, records an unbroken sequence of town officials from 1553.

Production Cuts Dim U.S. Scene

BY WALTER BREEDE JR.

NEW YORK (AP)—Business in the United States picked up in many key lines this week, partly under the stimulus of autumn weather. But the bright sheen of the boom was dulled a bit by a flurry of production cuts.

A lead and zinc mine in the Pacific Northwest changed from a six-day to a five-day week. Layoffs were announced by producers of truck tires, men's summer suits, tractors, stainless and alloy steels, automobile headlights and navy fighter planes. Most cited falling prices, sagging demand or heavy inventories.

Retail trade showed a marked increase over the previous week with volume also comfortably ahead of the year-ago level. Steel production inched up, heavy construction showed a substantial gain stock prices improved and bank clearings set a new high for the year.

Auto production slipped 8 per cent, largely because Chrysler was in the midst of changing over to 1954 models.

MONEY MARKET EASIER

There was new evidence of a general easing up in the money market. Prices of long-term government bonds climbed sharply while the interest rate paid by the U.S. treasury on its weekly offering of three-month bills sank to its lowest point in more than two years.

The government halted the sale of its new series of treasury savings notes—introduced May 11 at a sharp increase in the interest rate. The treasury said a new series will be made Oct. 1.

The head of one of the biggest consumer finance companies predicted more funds for lending would soon be made available through manipulations (he did not specify them) on the part of the federal reserve board.

Loudest gripe about "tight" money came from home builders who continued to complain about lack of mortgage credit. Albert M. Cole, head of the government's housing and home finance administration, said the government may intervene in the home financing field unless private mortgage lenders supply enough credit to maintain a "reasonably high" volume of home building.

PESSIMISTS SCORED

From other quarters came warnings against exaggerating the significance of cuts and other soft spots in the economy. Benjamin E. Fairless, chairman of United States Steel, denounced prophets of doom who, he said, "have lost all sense of proportion" in predicting a recession just because steel output is leveling off.

One of the mainstays of the current level of business is high employment. The U.S. commerce department reported that non-farm employment in August totaled 49,400,000—a new high for that month—but that the gain over July was the smallest since the end of the Second World War.

Living costs also set records—up 0.3 of 1 per cent on the government's Aug. 15 consumer price index. This rise will mean wage boosts of three cents an hour for 1,300,000 railroad workers.

MILK ORDER ECONOMICS C. OF C. STUDY TOPIC

General economic effects of milk-price decontrol above the producer level will be studied by a special subcommittee of Victoria Chamber of Commerce's civic affairs group.

Ald. Don Smith, vice-chairman of civic affairs group, will head the fact-finding committee.

Intention is to delve into all aspects of the provincial government Milk Board's orders No. 40, 41 and 42 with a view to determining probable economic effects on urban and rural Vancouver Island, particularly the Greater Victoria area.

In their search for information the C of C group will travel Tuesday to Nanaimo where Milk Board chairman E. C. Carr is scheduled to explain the milk decontrol orders to Island dairymen. To the forefront at this meeting probably will be the "basic quotas" for producers that are the core of the new milk industry policy.

Land Inspector's Life Spanned B.C. History

J. W. Smith, Dead at 85, Link With Island's Crown Colony Days

Former provincial inspector of lands and B.C. surveyor, J. W. Smith, 1403 Haultain, died Friday evening in St. Joseph's Hospital in his 85th year.

Born here in 1868 when Vancouver Island was a British colony, he took his first job at 16 and assisted in early railway surveys.

Yukon gold fever claimed him for three years, but the fabulous prices charged for grubstakes ate up the profits from his gleamings.

In 1895 Mr. Smith joined a sealing expedition and for two years traveled between the Aleutians and Japan. But he returned to surveying and only when his bride rebelled at the hardships of the life did he give it up to enter the provincial government service.

TWEEDSMUIR'S GUIDE

He retired after 32 years in the lands department, much of the time spent on the trail. Once he was called upon to guide an off-the-beaten-track tour by Lord Tweedsmuir, in 1937, who was then governor-general.

Surviving Mr. Smith is the widow, Nan, and one son, James R. Smith of Victoria. A brother, Frank, also resides here.

A daughter, Mrs. J. A. Sanders lives in Vancouver and is second daughter, Mrs. J. M. Kelly, in Kingston, Ont. There are five grandchildren. Funeral services will be held from Hayward's Funeral Home at 3 p.m. Tuesday, with Rev. J. L. W. McLean officiating. Burial will be in the family plot at Ross Bay.

FEAR RULES CANADIAN EXCHANGES

By BOB JOHNSTONE Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Toronto Stock Exchange can't get off the ground.

It would like to soar, or even settle for a gentle rise. But instead the Bay Streeters are just waiting. What for? That's what they want to know. Last week, they thought they were headed somewhere. They couldn't agree where, but they all thought they were at least ready to move.

Now, at the end of the week, they can't figure it. The exchange's Friday to Friday differences in indexes didn't vary a half point. Volume was the lowest since the seasonal doldrums of August.

Every session of this week's trading opened with the hope that a rise was in sight, but when the market closed Friday all groups were about the same as at the previous week's end. Western oils were down 45, the others less.

The SPOONS

BACK of Buckingham Palace is a vast lawn, about the size of a football field, margined with flower beds. Here the garden parties are held.

In the centre stands a large open marquee, its tall tentpoles topped with gilt spearheads. Pennants stream in the breeze, and the golden Royal Standard drapes itself to the wind.

Under the marquee, royalty stands to greet the guests, some of whom have entered by the front door of the palace and have had a glimpse of its heavy splendor. Others have come in by the garden gate.

The time I attended a garden party there, it was not quite as exclusive as usual. Over 5,200 other Canadians were fellow-guests with me. Usually, the royal garden party guests are dressed in formal afternoon wear, which is top hat, cutaway coat, striped trousers and dove gray vest.

buttoned wide and jaunty across the manly chest. Other male guests may be in uniform, often very tasty uniforms from India, Kabul or Venezuela. (There aren't many places left where tasty uniforms come from, come to think of it.) The ladies are in a great variety of summery frocks of a formal trend, which they won't wear again for another five years. It is a bright and gallant scene.

The time I was there, it was not so bright, though gallant enough. We were the 5,200 pilgrims on our way to unveil the memorial at Vimy, and we were in the clothes we travelled in and often slept in. We all, men and women alike, wore an extraordinarily homely khaki beret, as our distinguishing mark. Since we travelled in jammed ocean liners, jammed trains and jammed buses, and our baggage was limited to what we could nimbly carry, we were a pretty wrinkled lot by the time we got to Buckingham Palace for the garden party in our honor.

The invitations read "From four to six P.M." I have since been told that all royal garden party invitations read like that, but what you are supposed to do is arrive any time between four and six, take a dish of tea, nibble a few cookies, queue up at the marquee, make your bow or your curtsy, and then buzz off.

We didn't. We all arrived in a bunch, 5,200 of us. Traffic stood still while from every direction we pilgrims rendezvoused upon Buckingham Palace. We did not know that there were garden gates. We all made for the front door—through the beautiful iron fence gates, past the stiff and speechless guardsmen on sentry, through the front door. We parked our raincoats, parcels, umbrellas and bundles of souvenir pamphlets we had been gathering around the clockroom just inside the front entrance. It was big enough.

Then we swarmed out to the vast lawn.

And we stayed till six. Any garden party most of us had been at, you sat down on the grass. Which we did. From the smaller marquees around the margins, where the refreshments were being served, we got our tea and cakes and little sandwiches. The royal band played. Those who had special tickets—of course, the whole 5,200 of us couldn't have queued up—stood in line to shake the hand of the Duke of Gloucester, who was functioning for His Majesty that day.

But it was grand to be inside Buckingham Palace, and sitting here on the fine green turf, amid all our old dear comrades and their wives or widows, listening to the band, viewing the bright marquee and sipping tea.

"WHAT have you got?" asked one of my old sergeants, strolling up to where I was sitting.

"Got?" I checked.

"I got a spoon," said he, out of the side of his mouth.

Souvenirs. Nothing so appeals to an old soldier like souvenirs.

"Everybody's taking spoons," he urged.

I looked at my teaspoon. Inscribed on it were the words "Lyons Tea Shops."

I pointed this out to my friend, and to others round about. I explained that Lyons must be catering for the garden party.

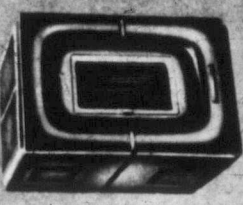

Pooh, said everybody, forking out their spoons and putting them back on their saucers. Lyons Corner House spoons?

Everybody had a couple of them already.

A dish of succulent spare ribs, prepared the Chinese way, is a treat indeed.

CHINESE PINEAPPLE SPARE RIBS

They can be served with rice for a festive dinner

WHEN Mrs. Beeton wrote about pork in her famous cook book, she devoted eight pages to discussions on the eating habits of the hog and illustrated the text with a variety of pen sketches of the types to be found throughout the world. We have less space to devote to the topic, but would like to add a word in praise of spare ribs, which can be glamorized more easily than other parts of the pig. I like my spare ribs stuffed and baked, or barbecued and served with sauerkraut, but if I were given just one choice, I'd take them baked the Chinese way, with pineapple. The recipe which is included here can be prepared a day in advance, with the exception of the glazing and frying. These steps should be done just before the dish is served.

PINEAPPLE SPARE RIBS (Serves 6 to 8)

- 4 lbs. spare ribs (cut into 2-inch pieces)
- 1 cup cornstarch
- 1/4 cup dark molasses
- 2 quarts of water
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1/2 cup vinegar

HEAT water to boiling point and add vinegar.

ADD ribs, cover till water begins to boil again; uncover; simmer 15 minutes. Drain and cool. This may be done a day in advance.
MIX cornstarch, soy sauce and molasses in a large bowl and allow ribs to soak in mixture until each is well coated. Most of the liquid will be absorbed.
FRY ribs in hot fat (370 degrees F.) until brown. Keep fat very hot while cooking. Fry a few ribs at a time. Set aside until ready to glaze.

GLAZE

- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup water
- 1 1/2 green peppers, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 3/4 cup vinegar

COMBINE ingredients, with exception of peppers and pineapple, in a large pan. Heat to boiling. ADD meat to hot syrup, cover and simmer 30 minutes until meat is glazed and tender.
ADD peppers and pineapple. Serve with boiled rice.

Catcalls For Papa

turned to his companion and said: "This is it. I wonder what got into that cobbler. This will be plain murder."
"Yeah!" replied the other. I looked at Mama. She was pale. Andy Marks climbed into the ring. I watched him closely. He was in very good shape. He was Papa's age and an all-round athlete.
Then Papa came into the ring! He was wearing a green robe with black trim. He seemed a stranger up there. It was weird. The hall was silent. There were no boo. You could almost feel the pity.
After the introductions, both men took off their robes. I looked at Papa. I had never seen him in shorts. He was built! You could hear the surprised murmur rolling up and down the hall. Even Andy Marks seemed surprised.
I had my fingers crossed, and I think both Mama and Nickie were praying, too. Here it comes, I thought, Papa's going to get killed!
The bell rang, and Andy Marks leaped across the ring to end it quickly. The crowd let out a roar. Marks threw a fast left-hand that somehow missed. He threw another, then a right, both missing. Papa landed with a hard left to the mouth! The crowd was stunned! Then the babble of voices, as neighbor nudged neighbor. I was blinking my eyes. Papa knew his way around that ring!
Papa landed two more lefts, then danced away. The roar was like thunder from the skies. Then Papa landed a hard left hook to Marks' midsection. It was real slick. Marks countered with a series of rights and lefts. Papa was allying most of them, bobbing and weaving like a master craftsman. I was bursting with pride. I was crying and laughing at the same time. It was my Papa!

Now Papa was stalking Marks. There was but one minute of the fight gone, but Andy Marks recognized the sign. This was no mere cobbler stalking him, right hand coiled. He was worried. The crowd was on its feet. The sound rolled in waves like the rumbling of many drums. Like an executioner Papa stalked Marks. Marks flicked out a left that Papa didn't bother to dodge. When Marks crossed his right, I didn't see Papa's right-hand shot. The hysterical crowd was blocking my view. The babble of voices told me the fight was over. They say Papa's right didn't travel more than six inches. But it was curtains for Marks!
They were pulling and tugging at Papa. The stamping and the whistling was something to hear. It was some time before order was restored.
MAMA managed to get Nickie and me to the crude, makeshift dressing room near the swimming pool. Papa was sitting on the table.
"Papa," I said, hugging him, my eyes full of stars. "you were wonderful!" Mama went to him and kissed him. Papa managed to hold the three of us in his huge arms.
"You should have seen your father in Madison Square Garden the year Nickie was born!" Mama was smiling happily. "I'm glad, John, that you have stopped hiding from yourself."
"So am I. It's not easy when a man's death is on your conscience."
"Nobody blamed you."
"I know. It's been a long time. We're getting old, Martha." Then Papa ran his fingers through Nickie's hair. "But it's not too late to make a champion out of you, Nickie." I sighed. There was a nice, sweet-toned piano in our parlor. It was good enough for me.

Along the length of the Atlantic Coast there's not a better fisherman than 49-year-old Annie Lyons, of Hadleyville, N.S.

Hard work keeps Annie young. After 16-hour day, she likes nothing better than a party.

MRS. ANNIE LYONS, 49, of Hadleyville, N.S., mother of seven children and grandmother of 11, is a human dynamo who begins her day at 3 A.M. and is still on the go at dusk. Rated one of the best fishermen on Canada's Atlantic coast, she is one of the few Canadian women who do enough fishing to qualify for the federal bounty. To merit this token payment, she must fish three months a year, catch 2,500 pounds of deep-sea fish, and use a boat with at least a 12-foot keel. Annie, who has been fishing since she was 17, is always far ahead of bounty requirements. Say veteran fishermen, "Annie's as good a fisherman as any one of us."
A jill of all trades, this brown-eyed, gray-haired woman has also tried her hand at boat-building, carpentry, woodcutting, farming, cabinet-making, truck driving, and is a pretty fair mechanic. Annie, who stands only five feet four in her hip rubber boots and weighs 143 pounds, can handle a yoke of oxen, shoe a horse, milk a cow, build a house, or knit a sweater. She makes her own lobster traps, repairs her herring nets, builds fences, and has cut, trimmed, and stacked 25 cords of pulpwood in a season.

"Lots of women have too easy a life," commented Annie, rolling herself a cigarette during a respite in her busy day. "I prefer to keep moving."

One of her regrets is that she failed to land a job as riveter in a shipbuilding plant during the last war. She applied for the job too late.

Her first love is the sea. Her father was a fisherman and took her with him on a trip when she was 17. "I loved it," remarked this energetic woman, who has collected the fishermen's bounty for 22 years. She ventures out into Chedabucto Bay in all sorts of weather, once had to toss overboard her catch of cod and mackerel to prevent being swamped. Fishermen in the area agree, "You don't have to worry about Annie. She can handle a boat with the best."

At the end of her arduous day, Annie Lyons likes nothing better than to dig out her mouth organ and play a lullaby for one of her grandchildren. When these photographs were taken she delighted her two-month-old grandson, Stuart, with a spirited rendition of The Crooked Stove Pipe.

Buyer Omer Anderson pays 42 cents a pound for this batch of lobsters. Some days Annie catches over 100 pounds.

this WEEKEND and NEXT

Depthless

Fred Hilt (Hollywood's Depth Bomb, page 36) is a New York writer whose specialty is Hollywood and movies. In this article, his first for WEEKEND, he describes the impact of 3-D and other new photographic developments on the movie capital. All these new techniques are designed to give the illusion of a third dimension on the screen. In the trade they are known as depthies and in the view of many experts the future of the movie industry depends on the public acceptance of them. Hilt's timely article will help readers to figure

Hollywood's Depth Bomb

will manage to turn Hollywood inside out, is open to argument. Meanwhile, for the movie business itself, and the people in it, 20th-Century Fox's bold stroke carries both blessings and a full measure of headaches.

From the artistic point of view, the innovation of the wide screen has introduced a vast range of new problems, particularly for stars and directors. At the same time, not unlike the birth of sound, it brings the movie medium considerably closer to the legitimate stage, with all the advantages and disadvantages that implies.

MR. SKOURAS is fond of saying that CinemaScope "liberates" moving pictures from their boundaries. Demonstrations of the system (the world premiere of The Robe, the first feature film to be photographed in Cinema-Scope, took place on Sept. 18 in New York) have proved that it indeed offers a much wider sweep and that, to a certain extent, it carries a greater illusion of depth and realism.

In this latter respect it does not rival Cinemascope. The story is told of the man who went to see the Cinemascope show and asked the woman in front of him to take off her hat. "I'd like to but I can't," she said, turning around. "You see, I am one of the characters in the picture."

As the industry moves to CinemaScope, the artisans of the screen will have to turn over an entirely new leaf. Closeups, for instance, will no longer be necessary. In The Robe, the picturization of Lloyd Douglas' best-seller, there are only four closeups as against an average 200 for the ordinary picture.

Entire scenes, lasting three to five minutes, may be photographed in a single take. This, of course, puts new demands on the actors, who must now be able to memorize lines and speak them without endless repetition. Stage techniques and stage presence from now on will be at a premium, and it is already freely predicted that the days when glamor at a soda fountain was enough to get a talent scout excited are over and done with.

In a sense, the wide screen repeats the calamity that struck many of Hollywood's most popular stars when sound replaced the silent flickers and voice levels became more important than camera angles. With CinemaScope bringing everything into sharper focus, even the extras, who used to hover in the background, must exhibit a measure of talent, since they are as prominent as the principal players.

CinemaScope, which makes for greater audience participation, also demands a new approach to realism. Painted sets immediately show up as the phonies they are. When Henry Koster, who directed The Robe, wanted some extras with beards, the makeup department obliged. Test shots gave the trickery away, and Koster spent some hectic hours trying out what depthies or depthies may mean to them in terms of entertainment.

The first major wide-screen "depthie" to appear in Canada is The Robe, the film version of the novel by the late Lloyd C. Douglas. Though long a minister (he was pastor of St. James' United Church, Montreal, from 1929 to 1933), Douglas is best known as the author of a lengthy list of novels, all best sellers and all on religious themes. The Robe was published in 1942. It was followed a few years later by The Big Fisherman, Douglas' last book. He died in 1951.

The Queen's Pin

The pin illustrated in The Queen's Pin (page 16) is something the Queen has been wearing for a long time. The fact that she seldom appears without it was spotted by Kit Shaw, WEEKEND's librarian, when she was going through a file of Royal photographs.

We asked Buckingham Palace about it. "It's a personal matter," said our informant. "The Queen has never offered an explanation of her attachment to it." So our librarian and readers can write their own romantic interpretations of Her Majesty's preference for this favored piece of jewelry.

This Week's Cover

We have a small confession to make about the piece, What Maple Leaf? on page 20. After picking the cover photo we got to wondering whether the maple tree in the picture was in fact Canada's national emblem. No one in the office seemed to know. We asked Staff Writer Stanley Handman to investigate. He decided to check in Quebec, which is where the leaf of the sugar maple is said first to have been adopted as a Canadian symbol. We think the information he got will interest and edify a lot of Canadians.

Underwater Adventure

Couple of weeks ago we mentioned the fact that WEEK-END's staffers have of late been covering an unusual amount of territory in search for magazine features. Next week we offer a good example of WEEKENDERS with the travel bug. Jack Carroll who, among other activities covers aviation and is an ex-war correspondent (Korea), has taken up spear fishing, a submarine sport that is fast attracting new numbers of adherents. Next week, in a WEEKEND story, Carroll tells about spear fishing in the Atlantic.

The Editors

to round up extras with real whiskers.

Because the clear focus of the CinemaScope camera makes it difficult to use stand-ins for the stars, a record duel in The Robe between Jeff Morrow and Richard Burton, took two weeks to film. The players had to use real weapons and, even though their routine was well rehearsed, frequently wounded each other. That meant a break until the cuts had healed up again.

WITH CinemaScope propelling the art somewhere midway between stage and screen, the 3-D boys also are driving in the direction of the legitimate theatre. Two popu-
graphed by the twin cameras as they were performed on a Hollywood sound stage. Top Banana, starring Phil Silvers, took exactly five days to complete, something of a record in time-conscious Hollywood.

CinemaScope is by no means alone in the field, even though some 50 movies in the process should be turned out in the United States during the coming year. Practically every studio is tinkering with some system of its own, from the Warner Brothers' "Warner SuperScope" to Todd-AO which will be used to shoot Oklahoma. The key to the other studios' reluctance to follow 20th-Century Fox and throw in their lot with CinemaScope is its incompatibility. A picture photographed in CinemaScope can play only movie houses that have the proper lens equipment. If exhibitors equip themselves for CinemaScope, what will happen to the $300,000-000 worth of ordinary "flat" movies that are still in the vaults, awaiting release? That is a question other producers have been asking themselves. So far, they haven't come up with a good answer.

In the interim, Hollywood is playing it safe. Practically all the major studios have sharply cut their production schedules to concentrate on "the big ones." They are adapting their movies to be shot for presentation in various screen ratios. The old films that are already "in the can" can be projected as blow-ups on larger screens. The effect isn't bad, except for the tendency to trim off actors' heads at the hairline as the picture is enlarged and height is sacrificed for width in the new screen ratios.

While Hollywood worries about lenses, ratios and other aspects of its plunge into the new medium—such as unemployment—the wise old owls in the industry, who have seen it suffer through the birth pangs of sound, are asking themselves: Where will it all lead?

We will have to wait about a decade, or maybe less, for the answer. Meanwhile the movie boys are already looking ahead, for new peaks to conquer. They are talking seriously about theatre television in color, 3-D without glasses and the possibility of adding smell to sight and sound. It looks as if movies are here to stay, better—and most certainly bigger—than ever.

He Grows at His Own Pace

By Marcia Winn

YOU can't rush a child into any phase of growth. You can't make him walk before he can make him talk, and you can't make him talk until he wants to. All through early life parents seem to be saying to babies, "Hurry, hurry, hurry, show us that you are about to be an adult..." and none of it does the slightest bit of good. Some even does harm.

Have you ever tried to wean a baby from the bottle to the cup before he wants to be weaned? Have you ever tried to force him into solid foods before he indicates either pleasure or interest in them? Have you ever tried to make him stand up on his fat, wobbly legs, holding onto your arms and making an astonishing idiot of yourself saying, "Come on now, let's see the baby walk!" before his legs will hold him?

In the growth of a human being there is a time for all things. This time varies with the individual child. Bonnie next door may prattle like a parrot at 15 months. Jimmy down the street may stand alone at nine months. Jerry scorned the bottle for good at seven months. Mary rode her bicycle like a trained chimpanzee at 18 months. But not your child. Is he deficient in something? Is he retarded? Is there any way to hurry him? The answer to all assuming he is a normal child without physical deficiencies, probably is "No." He is merely himself, an individual rather than a statistic.

Mothers worry most about slowness in walking and talking. Walking, like reading a few years later, is a matter of readiness. When does a little bird fly? When he is ready. When his wings are sufficiently strong and sufficiently developed and probably when he wants to find his own worm. When does a child walk? When his legs are ready and when he wants something he can get only by walking.

Speech is a slightly different matter. Many children are ready to talk, but don't because there is no need. Children usually speak to communicate a need. When every need is anticipated by a doting mother, there is no reason to try to mention it. Often children are slow to talk because no one talks to them. A silent, tense mother can achieve a silent, tense child. So, similarly, can a bossy one.

If everything a little child does is heralded as "wrong" or "naughty" or greeted with "No! No!", that child is going to withdraw as quickly as a pincushion plant. Have you ever seen a pincushion plant? It has delicate, almost fern-like leaves and a little purplish bloom that resembles a round pincushion. Touch its leaves and it closes up at once.

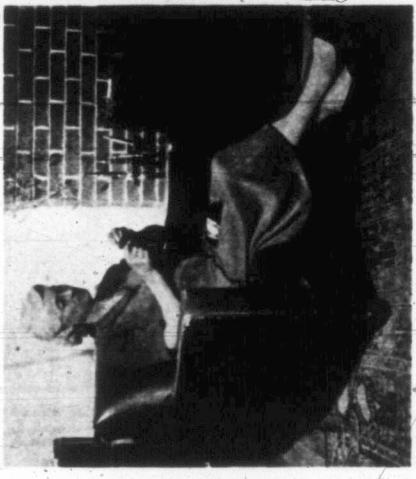

Speech is an emotional matter. You speak to communicate, and you speak to get approval of one kind or another of your thoughts, your actions, or even your possessions. This is as true at 62 as at two. If your child is not saying a few words and sentences by two and has been perfectly normal in other respects, such as sitting up and walking, you would do well to look in the mirror. Are you warm, affectionate, loving with him? Do you talk to him? Does he have any other child to play with? Do you shrill at him, saying, "Well, answer me. Talk!"? Do you wonder at heart if he can be a little stupid and sometimes indicate that?

DON'T worry until you have a valid cause for worry. No matter what your neighbors may say, many bright children are late talkers. Late talking does not mean feeble-mindedness. Only if your child does not talk by three or 3½ should you worry. Then an intelligence test by a good psychiatrist, preceded by a thorough physical examination by your doctor, might be in order. Perhaps your child has an inborn defect of speech. Perhaps he has had a brain injury or disease. Perhaps he is deaf. All these can delay speech.

Incidentally don't forget that an older child can delay a baby's speech by doing all his talking for him. The older one loves this assumption of authority and will run it into the ground until suddenly one day the silent baby will flare back with "I can talk for myself!" Then the battle is won.

WEEKEND SHORT STORY

"She's not Judy," he said. "She's someone else's baby."

Margaret's Baby

By Brian Moore
ILLUSTRATED BY TED HARRIS

TED HARMON drummed his fingers nervously on the waiting-room table as he listened to the old man in the white coat. Then:

"I just can't do it, doctor. I'm an engineer. I put in long hours at the plant. How could I look after a young baby?"

"It was only a suggestion," Dr. McNaughton said mildly. "It might be better for Judy, that's all. Paid foster parents may be very good people, but a child tends to forget its own parents when it's raised in another home. Now, if you could get a housekeeper—"

"No," Ted said. "No." Why couldn't they let it be? There'd be no need for a housekeeper if... He stared at the doctor, wondering, as he had so often in the past seven weeks, why this stranger should have been the last person to see Margaret alive. It didn't seem right. Even now, after the funeral, after the lonely nights alone in their home, he couldn't believe it had happened so fast. The unexpected haemorrhage, the frantic ride to maternity hospital, and then himself, alone in this waiting room, being told he would always be alone.

Even that night, Ted remembered, they had seemed more interested in the baby than in Margaret. Telling him that it was a girl, that it was in an incubator, that it would pull through. And then, almost as an afterthought, they said Margaret was dead.

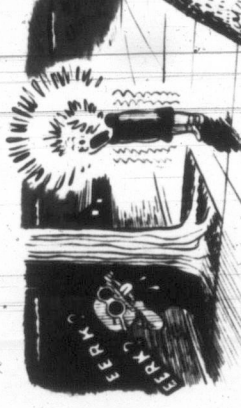

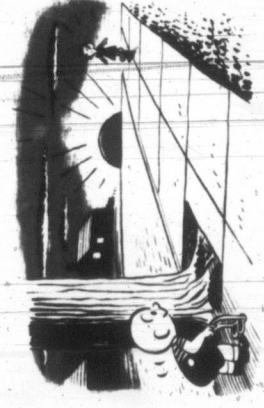

It wasn't the baby's fault. Sure, he knew that. But how could a helpless, squalling bundle replace Margaret, replace five good years of marriage? All it had done was remind him, each time he visited the hospital, that in this room, waiting for this baby, he had lost his wife.

Anyway, Judy's done remarkably well," Dr. McNaughton said. "She's been out of the incubator for three weeks now and she's gained three pounds. A very good recovery for a child that was two months before its time."

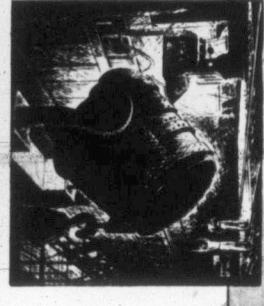

He stood up, an old man. Ted had passed a hundred times on the country-club golf course. An old man who had seen Margaret die. Ted watched him ring a bell by the door. A tall, scrubbed nurse answered his summons.

"Mr. Harmon would like to see his daughter, Miss Mullen," the doctor said. Then he turned to Ted:

STEEL and the HIGHWAY BUILDERS

Partners in the Development of Canada

Canada has nearly 600,000 miles of roads. But as yet only about one-third are surfaced, only 14% paved. That is why our highway builders play a front-rank role in progress!

For with the railroads, highways form the sinews that bind together all parts of Canada in unity... the arteries that keep goods and travellers circulating, and everything moving forward. Today the road-builder is a vital pioneer in the "opening-up" of new Canadian industries and resources—oil in Alberta, aluminum in the Rockies, iron ore in Labrador, the "white gold" of hydro-electric power. Tomorrow, back along the highways from great projects like these will flow benefits that will make better living, new jobs, new opportunities.

For hundreds of years men built roads mainly with pick and shovel. Then came steel, for concrete reinforcing and to make possible the tractors, scrapers, cranes, drills and bulldozers that do in hours the work that once took armies of men months of labour. Today, steel makes rivers safe for motorists to cross, mountains easier for workers to tunnel through, overpasses and "clover leafs" a commonplace in building highways that save you driving time—and save the life that might be yours.

Executive Offices: HAMILTON and MONTREAL
Sales Offices: Halifax, Saint John, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Windsor, Winnipeg, Regina, Vancouver, J. C. Pratt & Co. Limited, St. John's, Nfld.

The Steel Company of Canada Limited is proud of its partnership with the highway builders in these developments. In the last two years we have invested $60,000,000 in expanded Stelco facilities aimed at the goal of more Canadian steel for greater Canadian progress through the years ahead.

College Blues

About this time of the year, we receive a number of letters written by girls who are having problems with hair, nails and skin. Most of them are in first year of college and realize that pretty faces and youthful figures must be further enhanced by good grooming. While unattractiveness is often the rage among high-school students, they soon realize that it is out of place for a discussion of Byron or Huxley. Nail-biting is one teen-age problem. Pimples is another—but they are more often a sign of improper cleansing and dirt.

DRY SCALP

I am 17 and am troubled with dry scalp. I never seem to have a clean scalp, even after washing and rinsing well. Would you give me a solution?

BETTY J.
I'd advise a good massage, using warm castor or olive oil the night before your shampoo. The oil acts as a lubricant as well as loosening the scales and dirt. Be sure to place a clean towel on your pillow to save the linen, and the next day use a liquid or cream shampoo. Rinse and rinse your hair until it hurts to touch it. Dry your hair in the sun.

PIMPLES

Could you please tell me how to keep pimples off my face and how to have a smooth complexion?

IRENE R.
Pimples are actually infection, and you should keep your hands away from your face except when giving it the following treatment: A hot solution of epsom salts and water will bring the small, simple pimple to a head. Spread the skin gently with your fingers, using two pieces of tissue to prevent further infection. If the blemishes are stubborn, try rinsing your face with a solution of three tea bags in a cup of tepid water.

NAIL-BITING

At a party the other night I felt so embarrassed because my hands are so ugly. I bite at my nails and they are hideous, so can you suggest a way that I SILENTLY get a way that I SILENTLY

It is possible you bite your nails because they break off due to a lack of calcium in your diet. Eat lots of cabbage, preferably raw, and drink milk frequently. You should be drinking four glasses a day. Begin today to manicure your nails once a week. Try practicing the piano, knitting, crocheting or painting to keep your fingers busy.

covers, exposing the child's tiny shoulders. "Miss Mullen," he said, and Ted suddenly saw the doctor, the professional under the old man's mannerisms. "Would you check with the nursery, please? At once."

He smiled at Ted. "Now, just take it easy, Mr. Harmon. Nothing to worry about. We'll know in a

"I've never heard of such inefficiency," Ted began, but the baby bawled again, drowning his words. "It's a disgrace," Ted said, remembering Margaret and that night in this hospital. "What if something like this had caused . . . ?"

The door banged open and Miss Mullen entered the room, almost at a run. A second white basket was laid on the table. Ted lifted the covers.

A miniature hand, so small and delicate that it seemed unreal, caught his probing finger and held it joyfully. Then the baby gurgled and its mouth opened in a toothless, beatific smile.

"That's Judy," Ted cried. "Black hair, see? Mole on neck, see? And she knows me. Look at her, Doctor. She's smiling."

And he bent down, a big man, and raised the soft white bundle in his arms.

"I'm terribly sorry, Mr. Harmon," Dr. McNaughton said. "This sort of mistake is really very rare. I hope you'll accept my apologies. We all make mistakes, you know."

TED wrinkled his nose at the tiny, beaming face. She looks like Margaret, he thought. She has her eyes, her smile. She's our daughter.

"I know," he said. "I nearly made a mistake myself. Leaving Judy with strangers. You said she's ready to be discharged. If it's all right with you, I'd like to take her home with me now."

"But the foster parents," Dr. McNaughton said. "I thought they were coming to pick her up?"

More strangers, Ted thought. Paid parents. "No," he said. "I'll arrange something else. You suggested a housekeeper?"

"Yes," Dr. McNaughton looked surprised. "Well, if this young lady is going home, I must get her discharge papers ready. You'll excuse us."

Miss Mullen, flustered and blushing, picked up the other basket. She and the doctor went out together, leaving the big man walking up and down the room, crooning to his daughter.

"For a while I thought he wouldn't know the difference," she said. "Heavens, woman," Dr. McNaughton pointed to the basket. "Mrs. Cooper's baby is four months old." He smiled. "It's been an unorthodox sort of treatment," he said. "But I think Ted Harmon is ready to become a father."

You can do everything, go everywhere with confidence, for there's no chafing or irritation, no revealing outlines with Tampax. You find Tampax is easily disposed of, even without a tampon. A WESTERN shipper thought this one up. He handles freight to and from Alaska by means of aluminum vans which are loaded, driven to the dock, and there lifted, by cranes from their chassis into the ship's hold. More than a thousand different Canadian companies keep busy turning Canadian-made aluminum into everything from ash trays to minisweepers. And it keeps us busy wondering how next they will use this modern metal to save weight, or time, or trouble, or dollars for somebody.

screen, applied to feature pictures, is yet to come. Just to make things more complicated, Hollywood cannot be content with confining its enthusiasm for the new wonderworld of the screen to gadget-happy America. More than 40 per cent of the movies' total income now comes from abroad, and that means foreign patrons also have to be sold on the blessings of 3-D and the big screen.

There have already been some stunts in the wind. Indicating that Europeans are apt to be a good deal more sceptical about the advantages of third-dimensional films. In Barcelona, Spain, a premiere audience of one of the 3-D movies greeted it with whistles and screams, forced the show to stop.

In Switzerland a movie-house operator said parents, after seeing a 3-D film, were often told their children were lying when they said they had seen the effect. In Austria, the authorities went a step further and banned all picture houses because of their potential shock effects on youngsters.

in the U.S., despite the need to wear cumbersome polarized viewers, of which a staggering total of 80,000,000 have already been delivered to the theatres, the public appears still quite fascinated with re-discovery of the 3-Ds; and even if there are signs that the poor quality of the most of these movies so far has somewhat lessened this enthusiasm, the film studios are still betting heavily on the gimmick-ridden depictions.

HOLDING on to their cardboard-framed glasses, audiences duck and yowl in delight as an assortment of spears, knives, ping-pong balls, spiders and human figures appear to hurtle out of the screen. In Nebraska, an usher can lay claim to being the first 3-D casualty. "He was watching a 3-D western and severely banded his head against a wall when an arrow flew out of the way to be heading in this direction and he tried to get out of the way."

In Mexico, spurred by the fact that 3-D cameras were photographing their battle scenes in the picture Horrido, 200 mounted Indians and 100 extras put on such a stirring and realistic performance that, when the theater was cleared, audiences carried away 10 badly bruised warriors.

Naturally the third-dimensional pictures are setting their share of competition from the houses that stick to regular movies. Angered by the large crowds drawn by Bwana Devil, while he was counting empty seats for one of the better films, an exhibitor in New York had a large advertisement published to plug his attraction.

ing, assuming, in tall letters, read: "Would you rather see a good picture—or have a lion in your lap?"

If 3-D movies have begun to slip even before they could properly take hold, the fault lies largely with the studios' attitude of "anything goes." The depth films so far have concentrated primarily on their novelty and have sadly neglected story and content. As Peter Lind Hayes cracked recently: "By the time they make a good 3-D movie with a plot, the plot will be the novelty of it."

William Pine, who made Sangaree in the third-dimensional process, when asked whether he thought the public resented having to wear the viewers, replied briskly: "They'll wear toilet seats around their necks if you give 'em what they want to see."

Exhibitors, now relegating 3-D pictures to their "B" houses, say Mr. Pine is a decade behind the times. They recall Samuel Goldwyn's observation that "No picture can be better than its story. You can have sound, or color, or any other gimmick—they can't do the entertainment job themselves."

Mr. Goldwyn, who still has not decided which way to jump on any new picture he may make, likes to tell the yarn about the two producers discussing the new age in Hollywood. "My next film will be in 3-D," one said. The other waved this aside. "I have 4-D on my next production," he bragged.

"That's 3-D and a story too!"

While most of the studios are committed to turning out at least a few of the depthes, the biggest excitement in Hollywood today revolves around an attempt to stretch the width of the screen and give the movies a new dimension through the sheer weight of scope, with stereophonic (directional) sound added. No glasses are required for any of these systems. About a year ago, in Paris, Spyros P. Skouras, president of 20th Century-Fox, heard about a "new" lens. By that time he had tried, and failed, to buy into Cinemascope and was on the lookout for something new and drastic to introduce to the movie scene.

Skouras, who is from Athens and has never quite succeeded in mastering the English language to the point where more than a few intimates can be relied on to understand him, recalls how he was listening to scientists discussing the lens without his grasping what it was all about. Then someone mentioned the word "anamorphoscope."

He got it, and he also got Prof. Henri Christen's "squeeze" lens wide-screen process which he christened CinemaScope. This system, too, has been around since the mid-twenties. CinemaScope requires a screen 2½ times as wide as it is high, a radical break with the three-by-four format. It covers this expanse with a single projector and by virtue of a special lens at both the studio and at the theatre end. In this it differs importantly from Cinerama, which calls for a three-lens camera and three separate projectors working simultaneously to achieve its effects. For the 3-D movies, two synchronized projectors must throw the picture on the screen.

IN principle, CinemaScope, which provides truly astounding effects, sounds simple. At the camera, the lens takes a much wider angle than the ordinary prism. To compress this wider field of vision on to a standard 35 mm. frame of film, the lens "squeezes" the picture and elongates it so that the negative at all times looks like something that might appear on a trick mirror at a fun fair. At the theatre, a compensating lens straightens out the distortion and again spreads the image wide.

When Hollywood got its first look at CinemaScope and the accompanying stereophonic sound, which accompanies the action as it moves across the curved screen, the "obs" and "nabs" echoed from coast to coast. Skouras was—and still is—hailed as a true pioneer who had the courage to convert his studio's output to the new system. There are predictions that, in one form or another, all the industry will adopt CinemaScope. Whether, like the advent of sound in the late twenties, the giant screen

Act young and you'll stay young — until you play rocket ship with Junior

"WOULD YOU mind keeping an eye on Gary while I help serve the guests?" Mrs. Wallumpe asked with a sweet smile. "He'll be a good boy; won't you, pet?"—she patted his head—"and Mother will be right back." Over her shoulder she said to me, "Just play game with him or something."

Now, many men would think this was an imposition, especially as I hardly knew Mrs. Wallumpe and I hadn't been invited to her Uplift Guild tea. It just happened to be at the door soliciting a contribution for the community sports field.

But I was glad to oblige, because I've noticed that too many of my friends are getting old. They don't look any different; they say they don't feel any different. But the signs are unmistakable: They can't stand children any more.

My own theory has always been that to stay young you have to keep in step with young people—act young, I claim, and you'll feel young—and here was my chance to prove it.

"Well!" I said brightly, remembering a game that always amused the six-year-olds at birthday parties of 20 years ago. "Look—I'm an airplane. I'm flying to the moon!"

I made a b-r-r-r-ting sound with my mouth and, with my arms extended sideways, trotted around the living room, banking at the corners, and then out of the side door.

HIS vanished around the corner, and I walked quite a restful second before I went looking for him. I came to a closed door. I could hear faint footsteps inside. I opened the door and rushed in, exclaiming loudly, "Bag-bag-bag . . . bag-bag-bag."

The room was full of people. Surprised men and women were sipping tea. Dr. Dillworth was sitting there. When he saw me his mouth twisted in a firm line. Almost imperceptibly he pointed to another door.

In my red-faced confusion I hurried without a word through the doorway he indicated and down a hall. I came to a door labelled "Bathroom."

Then it dawned on me. Dr. Dillworth thought I had an impediment in my speech.

I hastened back to explain. I walked into the room and, holding up the stick to show clearly we were playing a game, I said to Dr. Dillworth: "I'm afraid you misunderstood me."

"You don't think," he said seriously, "that you could get to the moon in a piston job? You couldn't even do it in a jet. You need rockets."

Dr. Thilworth gasped. Then I caught a glimpse of Gary dashing down a hall past the other doorway. I chased after him, shouting: "Wait a minute, and I'll kill you."

I caught up to him in the driveway. "Bag-bag-bag," I said, pointing the stick at him.

Gary shook his head in utter despair. "Not bag-bag," he said. "Don't you know how a rapid-fire gun goes? Like this—A-a-a-a-a-a-a-a."

It was something like a man gargling, only more like a sheep baaing.

"A-a-a-a-a-a," I said.

"Ha-ha-ha-ha," I said.

It was just then that Mrs. Wallumpe came running out of the house, screaming: "The thief! The thief!"

In my hand, she seemed, for some reason, a revolver. She grabbed him up bodily and rushed him into the house, and I could hear quite a commotion in there.

I left them, and I have never gone back for Mrs. Wallumpe's contribution, which probably would have been small anyway. I'm growing old steadily now, and glad of it. As far as I'm concerned, if Gary wants to play Martians again with somebody, he can find himself a sheep.

NO BEEFS IN THIS ARMY

In a camp that's the treat of a lifetime for outstanding Royal Canadian Army Cadets, there's three weeks of training and play amid the majestic surroundings of Banff

Led by their fine pipe band, cadets parade down Banff avenue to Sunday Anglican church service. Except for the church parade, weekends are free for boys to spend as they wish.

Cadets learn how to evacuate casualties across river with stretchers and carrying slings. Rope is attached to tree at one end, to winch at other.

On camp grounds at foot of Cascade Mountains, cadets and officers play volleyball. Most officers are school teachers who belong to Reserve Army.

WEEKEND Staff Writer and Photographer

THREE weeks in the sunshine and majestic surroundings of Banff, Alta. — that's the reward offered to Royal Canadian Army Cadets at the annual national camp in the Rockies. To the camp, one of the "new" army's most successful attempts to mix business and pleasure, go cadets chosen from 59,000 across the country. Selection is on the basis of good behavior, smartness, service and scholastic standing.

At the sixth annual camp held recently at Banff, 151 boys had the time of their lives and, at the same time, provided a lesson in living together harmoniously. They were split into three companies and assigned to tents without a thought being given to places of origin, regimental affiliations, language or old-palships. After an initial feeling of strangeness the boys, whose ages ranged from 16 to 18, quickly settled in and were soon boasting about the respective merits of their tents.

Being honor cadets, the boys presented few disciplinary problems and camp chores were done by civilian labor, leaving ample time for training and play.

A staff of permanent-force officers and NCOs, bolstered by Reserve Army officers, administered the camp and trained the cadets in such matters as bridge-building, evacuating casualties across rivers, woodcraft, and mountain-climbing.

For relaxation, trail rides, swimming, picnics, and camp movie shows were organized. There were frequent invitations from the Banff Springs Hotel management for boys to attend the evening dances. There the official hostess made sure they were introduced to the young daughters of visitors.

Each company spent one of the three weeks in the bivouac area, five miles from the main camp, where living conditions were a little rougher. However, it was there that the more interesting training took place. Apart from one hour of guard duty, cadets had every evening off if they wished. Weekends were free, too, except for church parades on Sunday morning.

Then the cadets were taken by bus into the heart of Banff, formed up behind their own pipe band and paraded down Banff avenue to the grounds behind the administration building, where the service was held.

In one striking way the camp differed from the real army: There were no bees. An one cadet remarked from the depth of his experience: "I know this isn't the army, but it's sure a lot of fun."

That both 3-D and the wide screen fall more into the category of a well-staged revival show than a "revolution" in movie technique doesn't bother the film-makers, long practised in the fine art of rocking to the rhythms of their own publicity tom-toms.

The truth is that stereotypes are as old as the movies themselves, and in fact quite a bit older considering that a fellow named Euclyd in 280 B.C. first outlined the optical basics involved. Historians tell us that the first large screen, fashioned from the side of a huge barn, was built in 1899, and that the movie pioneers of the day somehow managed to fill it quite satisfactorily with moving images.

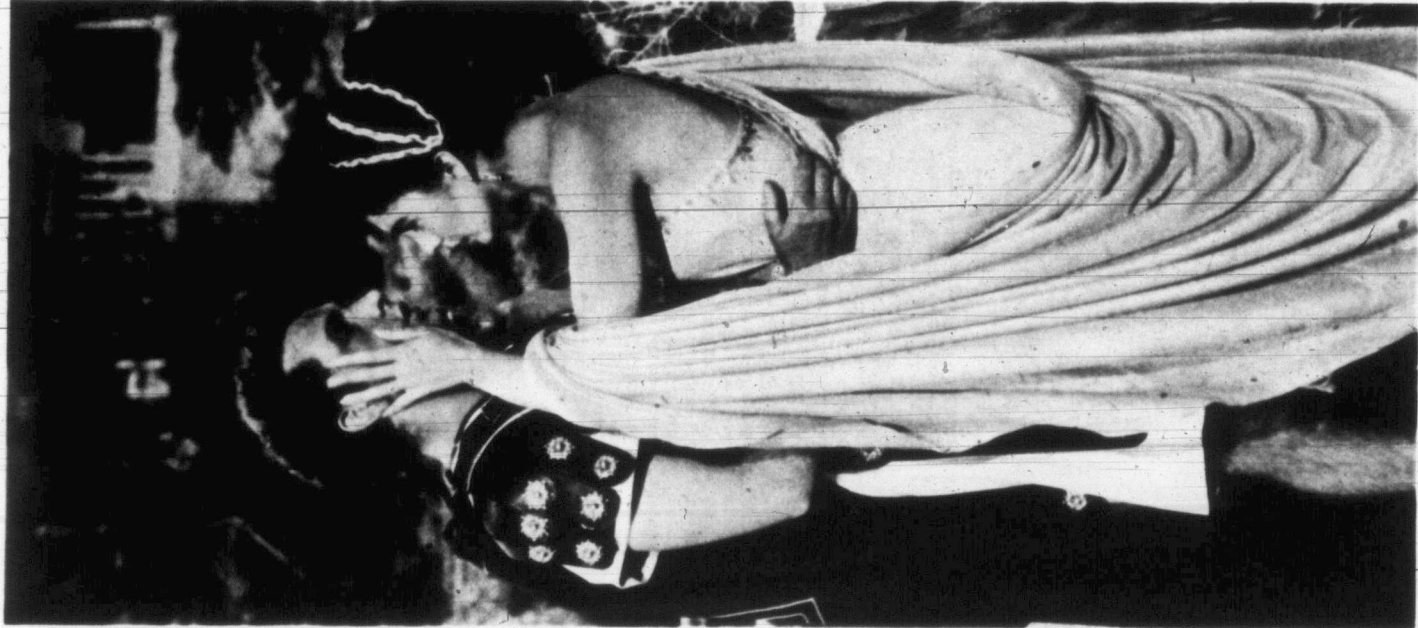

UNDERLYING the current excitement about the various technological advances and enthusiastic predictions about the movies' new shape to come is the harsh fact that, whether it likes it or not, Hollywood is faced with a "do or die" battle.

Weekly attendance at theatres is off from a peak 90,000,000 during the war years to a current 46,000,000. Profits are dangerously low. Television's inroads have already closed 5,000 movie houses and another 5,000, now operating in the red, may also have to shut their doors.

"For us this isn't a game," observed one of the industry's leaders recently. "It's a question of survival, pure and simple. Unless we can find some way of luring back our prodigal audience, some drastic changes are bound to take place."

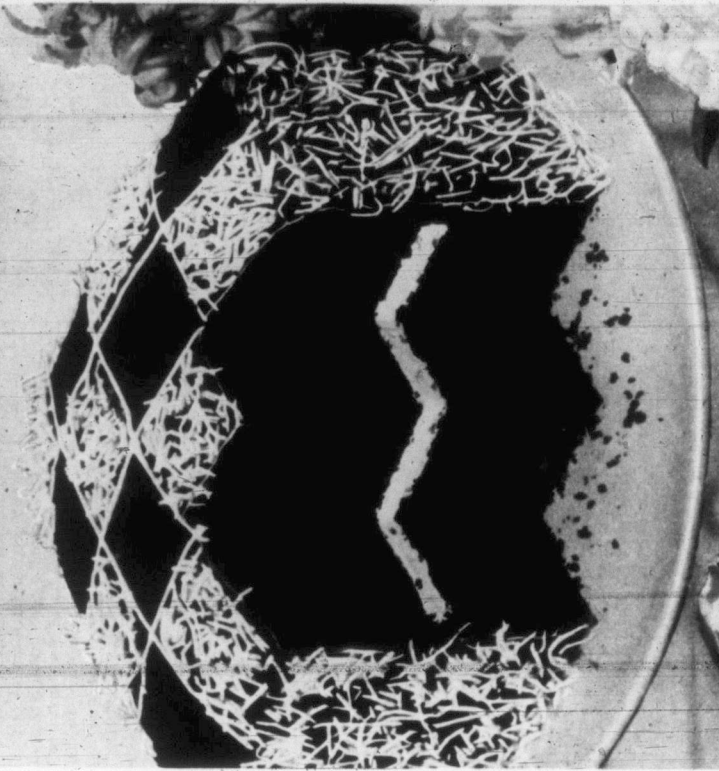

Little wonder, then, that the technicians in the movie studios' research laboratories are burning the midnight oil, trying to come up with something different that might catch the public's fancy and lead them back to the box office. In one respect—3-D—they have already succeeded. The test of the real wide (Continued on Page 38)

HOLLYWOOD'S DEPTH BOMB

In the movies' hectic 3-D race, a Biblical spectacle called The Robe is a leading contender

By Fred Hitt

THE tall man in the baggy suit and jutting a bulging briefcase approached the reception desk of one of the movie companies and, in a conspiratorial whisper, asked to see one of the executives. "What do you want to discuss?" he was asked. The man hesitated, then conveyed this message: "You may say I have invented a movie that doesn't need a screen."

The receptionist didn't even crack a smile. Instead, she eagerly reached for the telephone and, a few minutes later, the inventor was ushered in. In the American movie industry today, radiantly confused amidst an avalanche of third-dimensional and wide-screen film processes that seem to have popped out of nowhere, the word "impossible" has lost all meaning. So much has happened in so short a space of time that no one is willing to pass up a possible "beat" in the hectic race to improve the art of the screen.

It was only a comparatively short while ago that Hollywood first took notice of a panoramic process called Cinemascope which opened on Broadway and, within days, became the biggest drawing card on the Great White Way.

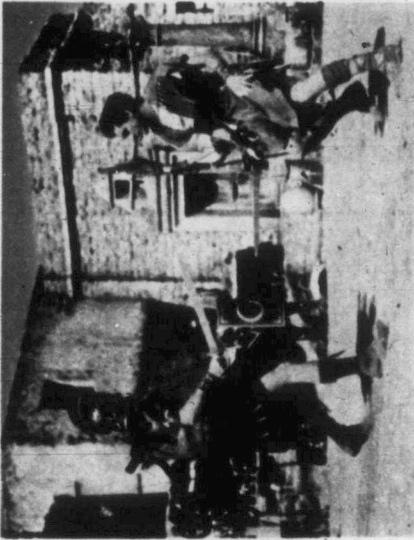

Then came a second-rate little picture entitled Bwana Devil, photographed in 3-D by a camera that was kept so secret, its inventor had it transported to and from the set in a locked trunk, and during intervals in the shooting kept it covered with a black hood. To see the picture, the audience had to wear special glasses. The sceptics scoffed, but the public didn't.

Bwana Devil, now heading for a fabulous $5,000,000 gross, triggered Hollywood's great awakening, with the technicians grabbing the ball and running with it, leaving the creators breathlessly trying to catch up. With one dramatic move, the movies swept away the veil of pessimism that had obscured a television-dominated future and feverishly launched into what even the most conservative presume to see as the start of a "new era" for Hollywood.

In crowd scenes like this, from The Robe, Cinemascope process gives illusion of reality. Curved screen makes moviegoers feel they are participating.

Hero Marcellus (Richard Burton) duels with Paulus (Jeff Morrow) in the epic, set in Rome and Palestine.

HOW TO LIVE WITH YOUR STOMACH!

This message is directed to the many thousands of men and women who, as the result of diagnosed hyperacidity, suffer from one or more stomach symptoms including heartburn, gas, pain, distention and other effects of after-dining distress.

Hyperacidity is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the gastric juice and the condition is caused by a variety of factors, including emotional upset, hurried eating, poor selection of food or in many cases a combination of several of these factors.

Excesses work on a different principle to the average antacid tablet, mint, saline or powder. Excesses are both antacid and antispasmodic. They not only reduce the acid content of the stomach but their antispasmodic property slows down further secretion, eases digestive tension, spasms and symptoms that often accompany this condition.

Remember that not all stomach symptoms are caused by hyperacidity. Distress may be caused by a lack of acid, organic abnormalities, or other causes. If you have been a chronic stomach sufferer and have not had your condition diagnosed, we urge you to see a physician at once. If your condition has been diagnosed as hyperacidity, Excesses can help you.

Warning—Beware of the origin of your Excesses. Do not use powerful indigestion remedies that are advertised as "antacid" or "antispasmodic" without the backing of a reliable pharmaceutical company. Excesses are sold only by registered pharmacists. No prescription required.

MAKE VERY SURE it's 'Vaseline' brand! Don't be content with a substitute. The pure petroleum jelly you want always carries the trade mark 'Vaseline'. It's the look-alike that's the imitation of the genuine is ever as good.

Aristocrats of catdom vie for prizes in big London contest

Photos by Peter Anderson

Blanket warms contestant.

THE feline is a factor to be reckoned with in the national life of Britain, to judge by the photos on these pages. They were taken at the Festival for Cats, held recently at the Royal Horticultural Hall, London, under the auspices of the Kensington Kitten and Neuter Cat Club.

For enthusiasts, the K.K.N.C.C. show was absolutely the cat's meow. Where else could you find a contest with 197 different classes for 28 known breeds? Where else could you find Abyssinian cats, Siamese cats, Persian cats and even Abyssinian cats all under one roof.

Where, for instance, could you find so many Blue Russians? Red Russians and White Russians are common enough, but Blue Russians — as any member of London's Russian Blue Cat Club will tell you — are aristocratic beasts whose ancestry can be traced back to the Vikings. In fact, all Russian blue cats have the surname Pavlovich, dating back to an illustrious grandfame.

At the show, there were more than 350 cats to be judged. And not all of them were in cages. Apparently there is a new British sport practised by London flat-dwellers who take their cats out for exercise on leashes, just like dogs. Talking of leashes, it seems, are very good at this leashed cat show. And there was a competition for cats who behaved best on the leash. This part of the contest was judged by the Cat Lovers.

But the festival wasn't only for live cats. There were paintings of cats as well as sculptures and china models for sale. A cat-lover could ask for nothing more.

single. But the White Sox somehow tied it up in the second and, by the fourth, Ciochetti really had to work. He threw wild to first in a tough spot and intercepted a throw from the outfield that would have caught a Red at the plate. He crossed up signals by catcher Ray Schalk. By the time he was yanked, the game was sewed up. The Reds had piled up a 6-1 lead and ended with a 9-1 score that astounded everybody—particularly Charles A. Comiskey, president of the White Sox, who told league president John Heydler, "I think there was something wrong."

The next day was Williams' turn. Either the outstanding southpaw was in terrific form or the Reds were awful because Williams ended with a four-hitter. However, he did lose the game 4-2, largely through walking three men in the fourth inning. This was the same pitcher who had walked only 58 men in 297 innings during the regular season. Two hits, including a two-run triple, gave the Reds three runs—enough to win. He also crossed up Schalk. The three other walks weren't really necessary and eventually led to Comiskey hiring private detectives.

Complications developed in the third game. Wee Dickie Kerr wasn't given too much of a chance to dominate the Reds from the mound at Chicago, but he came up with a three-hit shutout to win 3-0.

FROM the batting viewpoint, "Shoeshes" Joe Jackson was a special problem. Although he was in on the fix, the big, good-natured poked batted 375 in the series. The Reds pitched wasn't tough enough. "Gee!" he replied to Ciochetti's complaints. "I just seem to forget when I see these Cincinnati pitches hangin' there in front of me."

Again, big Weaver's booming bat was also doing damage. He had been approached and refused to take part in the fix. However, he knew what was going on and didn't report it, which was enough for the relentless Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who later "rejected without comment" a petition on Weaver's behalf bearing 10,000 signatures.

Another factor was the inspirational fight put up by the famed Eddie Collins, regarded as the equal of any all-time second baseman, and a steady 300 hitter. It was next to impossible for even the fires not to take fire at times with a guy like Eddie egging them on—and, one has to be in mind, that White Sox team is still rated as one of the dozen greatest teams of baseball history.

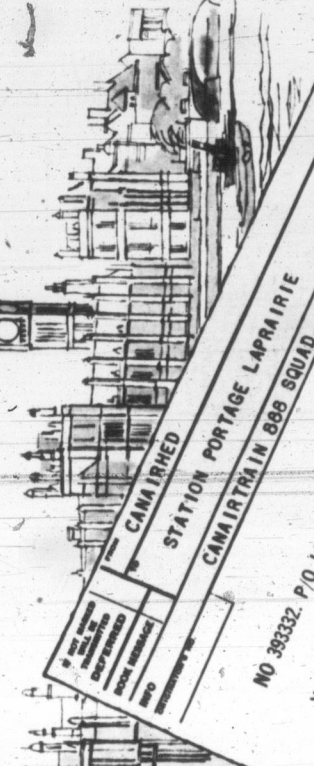

It was rugged work losing the next two games, even with Ciochetti and Williams pitching respectively. Ciochetti lost his game, 2-0, but he had trouble getting the Reds to co-operate. They only connected with his pitches five times, but two errors by his conspiring mates helped in the pinches. Williams apparently couldn't keep the "shine" off his ball. He pitched another four-hitter, but by bunching most of them in one inning and added

THE other players (except the absent Gandil) confessed and all were indicted for fraud. However, the trial didn't come up until July, 1921, by which time a sympathetic jury decided suspension from baseball was enough in the way of punishment and acquitted them. Landis said the confessions were enough, despite any jury's findings. So ended the sordid affair that, thanks to the game's self-imposed supervision and merciless war on anything resembling contact with gamblers, couldn't happen again. For the eight involved, it meant deprivation of a fat income playing baseball. They could also have made $2,000 more per man by getting a winner's split in the series that drew the second highest attendance of series' history up to that time.

And it was such hard work to lose.

Pontiac More than a Car... An Achievement

A General Motors Value

Pontiac is an extraordinary car in that it compares with the finest in quality—and compares with the lowest in price, a remarkable achievement.

Pontiac holds this unique position as the direct result of a deliberate aim to build a car that will give the pleasure and satisfaction that comes only from a fine car—yet at a cost so low that any new-car buyer can afford it.

That Pontiac has achieved this is evident when you look at the car—and obvious when you drive it. Certainly no car is more distinctively beautiful. In interior appointments and luxury, Pontiac measures up to cars costing far more.

But the quality that sets Pontiac most strikingly apart from other cars in its price class is its spectacular performance. Every mile you drive—in traffic or on the open road—Pontiac's big, high-compression engine responds so quickly, so smoothly, so effortlessly that you have constant proof that here's a car with power to spare.

Just a few pleasant miles behind the wheel will prove beyond all question that Pontiac offers an unmatched combination of quality and low price, that dollar for dollar you can't beat Pontiac!

It was Papa! I embraced him, burying my face in his huge chest . . . I thought he was going to cry. His strong chin trembled.

Catcalls for Papa

There are ways of dealing with people who get vicious amusement out of others' misfortunes

By A. J. Culla

PAPA had such old-fashioned ideas, you would have thought he was an old fogey with one foot in the grave. He was only thirty-five. He was younger than a lot of the fathers in our neighborhood who were regular guys, taking their kids hunting or fishing, or to the ball game. The way Papa felt about sports, it was a sin to play games.

Papa watched over Nickie and me like an old mother hen, keeping us from anything that might hurt us. I was almost thirteen at the time and Nickie was eleven. We lived in a pretty rough town. Neither Nickie nor I had ever been involved in a fight, though the kids took occasional swipes at us to keep us in line.

For me it wasn't too bad. I would have been content to stick to my books and practise the piano like Papa wanted. I wasn't too robust. They say I take after my mother—small and thin. But Nickie! Even that early in life he gave evidence of unusual strength. He was big for his age and growing rapidly. People thought I was the younger brother. He was Papa all over.

As I recall it, Papa's size was the only thing about him that gave us any feeling of pride. I must admit we were ashamed of him. Living in a small town, everybody knew everybody. I can't see Papa now, working hard in his shoe-repair shop, his face shining with sweat, his biceps knotting with the exertion as he worked the awl and flax skillfully.

If Papa had been a small man, you wouldn't have been so bad. But he looked so strong, you would think people would have respected him. They didn't. They said he was afraid of his own shadow. He was so soft-spoken and so polite that the men naturally made him the butt of all sorts of cruel jokes. The town wisecracker had a field day with him.

With the women, Papa was very popular. They liked him. They liked his gentle manners. To me, his bowing and scraping was stretching courtesy too far. I could never forget it, that he was a couple of neurotic dainty natures, were it not for a couple of neurotic kids. We were not allowed to play ball. We were not allowed to wrestle even with each other. We were not to engage in any contact sports of any kind. Above all, we were not to brawl in the streets. We were known as "those Barone sissies."

There was something about Papa that made us mind. It was a certain quality about him that made disobedience out of the question. He was not struck by Papa now, working hard in his shoe-repair shop, his face shining with sweat, his biceps knotting with the exertion as he worked the awl and flax skillfully.

"Where's Mama?" he asked, looking about him mysteriously. Nickie reached into the wash off the line. "What's that?" I asked. "Look!" He showed me the cover on which was the classic pose of John L. Sullivan. The title of the book was "The Manly Art Of Self-Defence."

"Where did you get that?" "At the dump," he looked at me, daring me to say something. "You'll catch it. Wait'll Mama finds out you've been to the dump!" "She won't mind out, unless you tell her." He knew I wouldn't tell.

"Learn to box!" "You better forget it." I was really frightened. "Aw, don't be scared. We can practise down here when Papa is working and Mama ain't around."

"Where are the gloves?" "We can make some." "I don't know, Nickie." I put the book back in his hands as if it had suddenly become too hot to handle. "Yellow," he seered. I didn't answer. I was scared. The pictures in the book fascinated me. I got it was that as much as Nickie's persistent rigging that broke down my resistance. He finally lured me to the cellar. With some flour sacks wrapped around our hands and fastened on our wrists with rubber bands cut from inner tubes, we had makeshift gloves. From the book, we learned the stance, the left lead, the right book, the counter-punch, the right cross, and, with difficulty, we tried what the author termed "combination punches." I have no way of knowing how much we actually learned. The illustrations, I know now, were terribly old-fashioned and unsuitably stiff. It was an old book.

NICKIE glared in the skirmishes. Being bigger and stronger, he managed to floor me repeatedly. He was beginning to think he was pretty good. I thought he was, too. It was a time, in our quiet lives, of great adventure. It was the first time either of us had ever done anything contrary to Papa's wishes.

If I'd had my say, the whole affair would have had no chance to get started. But it was Nickie. His body and restless spirit demanded more than just to eat, sleep, and study. Papa should have realized that. Nickie was growing. It was inevitable he would tick over the traces. The day he told me about it, I almost died.

"I'm fighting Joe Marks Saturday at the church tournament!" "What will Papa say?" "He won't know till it's all over. Then I don't care."

"Please, Nickie, forget it," I pleaded. "Joe will kill you!" "I can lick him." I was afraid of that. Nickie was getting too big for his britches. "Remember," I warned, "I don't know anything about this." I left him in the cellar, doing the exercises in the book. What was Nickie using for a brain? Joe Marks was my age. His father taught boxing at the Y.M.C.A.

The news of Nickie fighting Joe Marks at the annual kid tournament caused quite a stir in the neighborhood. One of those Barone sissies was going to fight! And fighting Andy Marks' kid, no less! I don't see how the news missed Papa. I lived in mortal fear. Papa was the same hard-working, bow-limbed, scrapping, flower-raising, peace-loving man he always was. He should have been a priest, Mama said he was considering entering a monastery when he was single. Then Papa met Mama. Papa seemed completely oblivious to all the stir Nickie was creating. Saturday night came and Nickie begged me to come and see him fight. I didn't wish to be a party to his madness, but out of family loyalty, I consented. He made me carry his sneakers, a pair of borrowed boxing trunks and Mama's bathrobe into the church auditorium. Once inside, I found a good seat fairly close to the ring.

I enjoyed the bouts tremendously. I had never known such excitement. I threw myself into the spirit of the thing and urged my favorites on like an old campaigner. When Nickie came into the ring, I got butterflies in my stomach. You would have thought I was fighting Joe Marks. At the sight of Nickie, the crowd let out a loud chorus of boos. How they must have despised us Barones! It was a Joe Marks crowd, to say the least. I was biting my nails.

I was afraid for Nickie. Joe looked awfully big, though there was little to choose between them in weight. Joe was two years older and he had his father in his corner. The bell rang. Nickie approached Joe Marks stiff-legged. He had assumed the John L. Sullivan stance. Evidently it was very funny for the auditorium rocked with laughter. Men were going into hysterics, slapping each other on the back. I didn't see anything funny. Nickie threw the first punch, swinging his right hand awkwardly, and nearly fell to the floor when he missed. Joe danced in and stabbed him four straight punches with his left hand. They were hard, jolting punches that angered Nickie. He lost his temper and flew at Joe, swinging lefts and rights in a flailing motion that sent the crowd into fits of laughter once more. Joe Marks was smiling broadly.

Joe knocked Nickie down with a right-hand to the side of the face. Nickie was hurt, but he got up without a count. I found, to my surprise, that I was blubbering. Nickie was so woefully inept. Joe Marks toyed with him, cutting him up with a series of lefts.

This was no kid stuff with Joe Marks. His boxing was strictly grown-up. Joe knocked Nickie down again. There was blood on Nickie's face.

I was gripping the back of the seat in front of me. The crowd was savage now. I felt a hand gripping my thin shoulders nervously. I looked up. It was Papa! I embraced him, burying my face in his huge chest. When I looked at the ring again, Nickie was getting to his feet. It was sheer animal courage. He was still trying, though it must have come to him that it was a futile effort. Marks hammered him unmercifully against the ropes. I looked up at Papa. I thought he was going to cry. His strong chin trembled. Poor, gentle Papa! How it must have hurt!

THE referee stepped in and stopped the fight. Nickie was reeling. Papa let go of me. He leaped to the ring, crawled between the ropes and carried Nickie out of the ring in his arms. The crowd was having a Roman holiday. Andy Marks, a proud, jubilant father, was dancing around his boy in unrestrained glee.

"Hey, John," he called out to Papa, "keep your kids in your rose garden or they're liable to get hurt." Papa walked down the aisle. Someone started to sing, "Ferdinand, Ferdinand—" I hated everybody in that hall. Papa didn't blink an eye. You would have thought he was a walking statue. In that moment of his greatest humiliation, I think I was closest to Papa. He was my father, and I loved him.

Nickie wasn't hurt bad. Mama fussed over him until Papa had to tell her to leave him alone. Strangely, neither had anything to say about what had happened. They tried to forget the whole affair. We soon learned that this was impossible. People can be vicious. The wages held Papa up to so much ridicule, our lives were a veritable hell. Papa's manners at them, the neighborhood husbands used this means of getting back. It had never bothered Papa before what people said or thought. But then they had never so openly shown their feelings for him. I think Papa did a lot of analyzing—both of himself and of his children. We were having a rough time of it. We had no friends. I felt sorry for Nickie. It was rougher for him.

There were those like the principal of our school and the parish priest, and many of the nicer neighbors, who were highly indignant at the whole affair. But what could they do? They couldn't approach Papa and say, "Mr. Barone, we are terribly sorry the fellows are riding you and your family." It was a delicate situation.

FOR the next few days, Papa carried the weight of the world on his shoulders. It was as if he had been rudely awakened and dropped from the nice, pink, safe cloud he had been on and exposed to all the nastiness about him. There were long talks between Mama and Papa behind closed doors at night. They were important talks.

Then one day, after supper, instead of going out to his garden, Papa climbed into his old sedan and drove away. He repeated this every night after that. Maybe Mama knew where he went, but she wasn't telling. It was a mystery shared by the whole town. It became common knowledge that Papa drove into the city every night. There was much speculation. The consensus of opinion was that he was planning to move his family into the city, and that he was looking for a place to live and for his repair shop. I was inclined to go along with that. Where was Papa's pride? Letting the town nitwits drive a big man like him to cover!

Then the bomb burst! It stunned the town like it was never stunned before. There was the Y.M.C.A. charity bazaar show coming up, and Papa had arranged to be Andy Marks on the card! The town was set on its collective ear. In every shop and on every street corner, it was the only topic of conversation. The notion that Papa had been going into the city to get into shape and perhaps get boxing lessons tickled the public funnybone. So that was the mystery!

What a noble, foolish gesture! Poor Don Quixote! Fighting windmills in an effort to gain respect for himself and family. The odds were having a gay time with Nickie and me. Hardly a day went by that we didn't get cuffed around to show us what was in store for Papa.

There was no budging for Nickie and me. The old order seemed gone forever. I thought Mama was going to have something to say about the affair, but she was letting Papa alone. She was wearing a worried look.

There were those in the neighborhood who thought things had taken a ridiculous turn. They tried to dissuade Papa, but the curb reboiled from the normally polite Papa stopped them cold. The Y.M.C.A. auditorium was packed to the rafters. Charity was going to be a big winner. Nickie and I sat on either side of Mama. She sat there, watching the preliminary fights, not seeing, but biting nervously on her handkerchief.

The bouts dragged on, and except for the relatives of the participants, no one really cared who won or lost. That's what a hold Papa's bout had on the public. There was an excited buzz in the hall. A gruff character in front of us

BABY TOMMY

Baby Tommy One of Many in Search of Foster Parents in Victoria

By PETE LOUDON

There's a five-month-old baby looking for a new set of parents in Victoria today.

His own have given him up for adoption.

He's the kind of little boy who will soon be smeared with paint in his hair, biting holes in rubber ducks and dumping ashtrays over the rug.

Altogether, he looks as healthy, appealing and loveable as any other baby. But he's never had a dad to conjure smiles for and he never had a name.

Today he has lost his mother. He's a sacrifice to pride. He's illegitimate.

In the foster home where he lives until he finds some parents, the people call him Tommy.

His story starts in a little prairie town.

His mom was a high school girl little more than a year ago. She had a good home, decent folks, was brought up in a church-going society.

She was pretty and popular. She was 17 when she picked one special lad for a "steady." He was 19 and ready to graduate.

But he never did. Suddenly the girl was in trouble. Running away was the only out, they thought. The boy stood by her at first. His savings brought them to the coast and they were to be married in Vancouver.

When they got there they found they had to have their parents' consent and rather than write home they decided they were man and wife in fact and would wait until they were 21.

The boy had three jobs on the mainland but none lasted. He began selling household implements and was assigned to Victoria, where that job, too, played out.

Tommy arrived while the pair was wondering how to pay rent on a two-room walk-up flat in a side-street hotel here. The boy never went to the hospital to see the baby.

When Tommy and his mother were ready to come "home" the young father was gone.

That was five months ago.

The desolate young mother, shamed and heartbroken, was compelled to tell her story to hospital officials, who called the Family and Children's Service.

Sympathetic authorities tried to help the girl, offered to place the baby in a foster home, find her a job until she could afford to return to her parents.

She did go back to her parents... but she left Tommy in the foster home. She wrote the Family and Children's Service this week.

"I couldn't bring that shame on my family," she said. "They don't know about Tommy." And she signed away her baby.

So Tommy is a new problem for social workers at Spencer House.

He's not a problem as far as arranging an adoption is concerned. That will soon be arranged, and there are hundreds waiting for babies as cute as he.

But he is a problem because he represents the 159 other illegitimate children the welfare workers have been asked to assist in, the last year in Victoria.

They didn't all need new parents. Eighty-eight were adopted. Sometimes the social workers made provision for the unmarried mothers to be able to keep their children. But every case undertaken was expensive.

And the family and Children's Service was busy over the same period helping other family troubles toward settlement in 429 instances. The service also worked for 152 children who were charged in Juvenile Court.

The young men and women case workers provided foster home care for 398 children during emergencies and in all served 1,818 residents here.

Most of this work is only possible if Victorians continue support of the Community Chest, for Family and Children's Service is the largest member agency.

Care of babies like Tommy and the other family patchwork undertaken by the agency will use up 36 per cent of every dollar collected in this year's $210,686 campaign, starting Oct. 1.

Union Raids Rival

SIU Claims New Group at Klemtu

Seafarers' International Union (SIU) is continuing its organization drive among the B.C. Fishermen in the face of strong opposition from the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

Norm Cunningham, SIU port agent in Vancouver, said today that the SIU had signed up the Klemtu local of the UFAWU "100 per cent."

Klemtu is a village midway between Cape Scott and Prince Rupert. The local is the second the Seafarers claim to have "taken over" from the SIU.

WELL RECEIVED

Mr. Cunningham said his organizers in the field have been well received at all ports of call. The UFAWU claims, however, that the opposite is true.

"Regardless of the mudslinging, they are doing fine," Mr. Cunningham said. "I'm more than pleased with their work."

"In August the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada suspended the UFAWU for its alleged Communist leadership. Mr. Cunningham said the SIU entered the field on the request of groups of fishermen who wished to see the SIU dominant in the trade.

A week ago Mr. Cunningham reported the SIU had signed 74 of the 76 members of the Quathiaski Cove local of the UFAWU, and that his union still held their membership.

FOUGHT BACK

The UFAWU, however, has fought back.

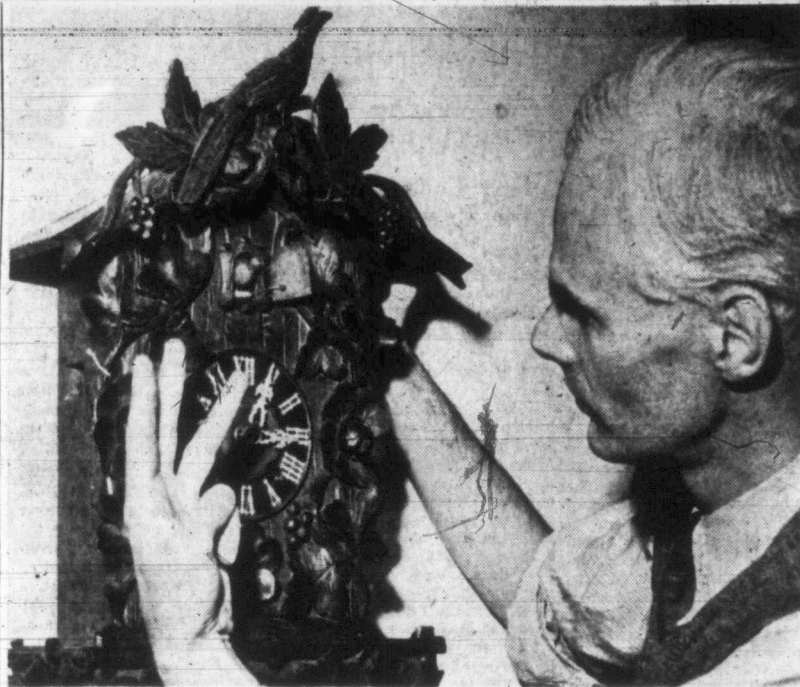

At a meeting of the contentious Quathiaski local in Campbell River Friday night, attended by 51 fishermen who still claim UFAWU membership, union secretary-treasurer Homer Stevens occupied the floor for a good part of the meeting.

He condemned the suspension by the T.L.C., saying it should have been a matter for floor debate and not executive action. He also criticized the SIU attacks on political grounds.

"Officers are elected for what they do for the union—not for their politics," he said. "I'm not ashamed of my political beliefs. It's a free country for free thought."

"If the T.L.C. says this it will be able to suspend even the 'palest pinks,'" he said.

His only opposition was from Don Cox, a fisherman who admitted joining the SIU, and who said when the secretary-treasurer "can't cross the border to the United States to discuss fish prices, it's time for a change."

As Daylight Saving Time draws to an end today, Gordon Petter, clock expert, explains the facts to this hard-working cuckoo. "It's three now," he says, "but at 3 a.m. Sunday it will be 2 a.m. Sunday? Understand?" And the bird mutters under his breath "Three a.m.—2 a.m.—no wonder I'm cuckoo."

SUN TIME BACK ON MONDAY

Clockwise Cuckoo Can't Go Backward

A cuckoo bird is a bird will to work 24 hours a day, but he objects strenuously to going backward.

This timely advice comes on the last day of Daylight Saving from clock expert Gordon Petter, proprietor of the Clock Shop, Fort Street.

"It is perfectly okay to turn back your watch by one hour," he explains, "but cuckoo and other striking-type clocks should be moved forward 11 hours."

"If you turn back a clock which strikes the time, you can easily damage the striking mechanism. This in turn can effect some other part, and you'll be faced with a hefty repair bill."

Mr. Petter points out "this is especially true of older clocks.

So the rule for the ending of daylight saving time is—turn your watch back one hour, set your striking clocks ahead 11 hours.

But be sure you change back to "sun" time. Who would want to be an hour early for work on Monday?

Frederick A. Needs Funeral Service Set for Tuesday

Funeral service will be held at 1:30 Tuesday for Frederick Alfred Needs, former immigration officer here, who died Friday at his home, 3049 Millgrove.

The service will be held at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel with cremation following at Royal Oak.

Mr. Needs had been a resident here since 1931 and until four years ago was head of the Chinese section of the immigration department.

Born in England, Mr. Needs came to Canada in 1912. He was with the forestry department before joining the immigration department.

Cedar Hill Neighbors Win Lady Luck's Smile

Lady Luck played favorite with two Cedar Hill Road residents Friday night.

THETIS LAKE 'DISGUSTING' SAYS OFFICIAL

Lack of co-ordination between Greater Victoria municipalities is to blame for "disgusting" conditions at Thetis Lake, according to a P.T.A. official.

At a meeting of the Victoria and District Parent-Teacher Council Friday night, health committee chairman Lloyd Smith warned parents against permitting children to use the lake because of the conditions of dressing rooms and toilets.

"The city cannot carry the load alone in providing facilities there for all of Greater Victoria," he said.

Two-Year-Old Boy Week's Fifteenth Victim of Polio

A mild case of polio contracted by a two-year-old Saanich boy Friday brought to 15 the total number of cases reported in Victoria this year. There have been 80 cases on Vancouver Island and four deaths.

The youngster is the 15th case to occur in Greater Victoria in a week.

Crusader Exercises On Eve of Sailing For Korea Waters

In the Far East, Crusader will relieve HMCS Athabaskan, now completing her year-long, third tour of duty. Athabaskan's officers and men will be home in mid-December, in plenty of time to spend Christmas with their families.

City Building Plans Total $3 Millions

Industry Heads Optimistic Here For Continuing Winter Activity

Contracts to the value of $3,000,000 are placed or pending for Victoria churches, schools and hospitals, a round-up of the building situation reveals.

Luney Bros. & Hamilton Ltd., McKinty & Sons, George Wheaton, Sutton & Sons, Farmer Construction Ltd., Commonwealth Construction Co. Ltd., all of this city, and Howden Construction Co. Ltd. of Vancouver, have applied to architects Wade and Stockhill for plans and specifications with intention to figure on the Victoria Nursing Home contract.

NEW SCHOOL

Another big Wade & Stockhill-designed job to cost upwards of $600,000 is Lansdowne Junior-Senior high school, tenders for which will close with Greater Victoria School District No. 61 at 5 p.m. Oct. 27.

Wade & Stockhill also are responsible for the architectural work on the north and south towers of Christ Church Cathedral; a proposed medical building designed for Medico-Arts Building Corporation on Pandora; and the new Victoria Hospital, the Salvation Army, Johnson Street job.

Tenders were opened during the week at the offices of the architects, Whittaker & Wagg, for erection of a new pathological unit at Royal Jubilee Hospital. H. E. Fowler & Sons, Ltd., submitted a low tender of $41,570.

Young Woman, Man Facing Narcotics Possession Charge

A young woman and a man, charged in city police court today with being in possession of narcotics, were remanded to Monday without plea.

Charged were Lenore Watson of Vancouver and Dennis Charles O'Brien, no fixed address.

In answer to a question from Magistrate Hall, the woman said she had turned 18 in August.

O'Brien requested bail but this was refused by the magistrate.

Less Milk Used Here, Department Survey Shows

Victorians are drinking less milk than they were two years ago, it is shown by a survey conducted by the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

Milk consumption fell off by about 10 per cent in Victoria when the Milk Board increased the retail price of milk by three cents per quart in 1951, it was disclosed.

A similar decline in milk sales was noted in Vancouver and other centres in B.C.

It was pointed out that Milk Board officials fully expected a decrease in milk sales but believed milk consumption would climb back to former levels as soon as the public became accustomed to the new prices.

The anticipated rebound in milk consumption, however, did not materialize.

ASK THE TIMES

Q.—Was lacrosse ever played at the Victoria Exhibition (B.C. Agricultural Association) in the old days?
A.—Yes. As far back as 1883 the Daily Times carried advertisements leading up to the fair, August 7 to 12, listing attractions which included "horse races, gymnastics, lacrosse, athletics, etc."

Q.—Are foreshore rights obtainable by an individual? If not, from what date were they unobtainable?
A.—Yes, such rights may be obtained but only on application to the provincial or federal authorities, depending on which has control in the area in which the person is interested.

Q.—Is it known how many lives were lost when HMS Victoria sank after being in collision with HMS Camperdown during fleet manoeuvres in the Mediterranean, June 22, 1893?
A.—A history records the loss of life as 359 officers and men, including Vice-Admiral Tryon. The Victoria was Tryon's flagship.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "Ask The Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest.

A SPORTORIAL

What on earth is wrong with the Cougars? We do not refer to the genus Canis felis concolor, we mean the genus hockeyplayer whose winter habitat is Victoria.

And what is wrong with them, is what we would like to know.

Does not Lester Patrick realize he cannot continue to trifle with the loyalty of Victoria hockey fans?

Does not Lester Patrick understand he owes something to the Victoria fans, and we do not mean money?

Lester Patrick has nothing but money. Why does he not spend it on players who can produce GOALS and VICTORIES?

In case you think we are being harsh on Mr. Patrick, or unjust in any way, simply look at the record for the 1953 hockey season.

The Cougars have not won a single game in the 1953 hockey season!

The Cougars, moreover, have not even eked out a single TIE in the 1953 hockey season!

And—difficult though it is to believe—the Cougars have NOT EVEN LOST A GAME in the 1953 hockey season.

Surely there is something radically wrong with a team which can neither win, lose, nor draw.

It is time Lester Patrick let the moths out of his wallet long enough to procure players who can provide wins, draws, or losses for the loyal Victoria fans.

We must not let our thinking on this important subject be clouded by the mere fact the hockey season hasn't yet started.

Loyal hockey fans of Victoria—attend the pre-season game against New York Rangers Tuesday—and DEMAND a win, loss or tie!

GALLUP POLL IN CANADA

Churchill Should Retire Is Belief of One in Two

BY CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

The man Canadians admire most in the world today is Sir Winston Churchill; but one in two of them think it's time he retired as Prime Minister of Great Britain.

This belief starts at a low of only 36 in every 100 in the Maritimes, and rises to a high of 65 of every 100 B.C. citizens who have this opinion, says the Gallup Poll. Difference in opinion on whether Sir Winston should, or should not, leave the post to which he has brought such brilliant does not vary to any great extent between age groups, nor between men and women. Argument lies in regional points of view only.

The question which a recent cross-section of Canadian adults answered for interviewers of the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion was this:

"As you know, Sir Winston Churchill has been quite ill for some months—and on his last birthday was 78. Do you or do you not think the time has come for him to retire as Prime Minister of Great Britain?"

Comparison of replies from the national average, with those of the five regions studied by the poll, reveals the increasing strength of opinion that Sir Winston should retire—as charted from the Maritimes to B.C.

	Should Retire	Should Not Retire	No Opinion
CANADA	50%	37%	13%
Maritimes	36	50	14
Quebec	47	39	14
Ontario	49	38	13
Prairies	59	29	12
British Columbia	65	29	6

While some citizens had definite opinions, others gave qualified answers. These people felt that Sir Winston should retire—"If he feels like quitting." "Only if he can find someone as good." "If his doctor advises it."

Others who felt he should retire said he should stay as long as his mind and health hold out. "If he remains as an adviser," said others. "Let him attend another meeting of the Big Four first," a Maritimer said. "He'll be the first man to acknowledge when it's time for him to go," said some.

Question of a successor to what a Canadian called "a fine old chap" is one on which Canadians have no enthusiasm at all. The half of the population who said they felt he should retire now, were asked:

"Who do you think should take Sir Winston's place?"

About half the group said "Don't know." This is the way names of possible successors ranked in popularity:

	Retire	Should Not Retire	No Opinion
Anthony Eden	18%
R. A. Butler	3%
Clement Attlee	2%
Aneurin Bevan
Miscellaneous	1%
Don't know	26%

One citizen summed up the attitude of most Canadians, apparently, in trying to name a successor to Sir Winston, when he said in reply, "It would take two men to fill his shoes."

Others studied the question by leaving the decision to the prime minister. "Someone appointed by Sir Winston himself," they said.

Churchill's popularity as the man Canadians admire most has been established in a series of Gallup Poll studies. In January, 1952, Churchill was named by 27 per cent of Canadians for this honor—with the Pope second at 12 per cent.

Baptist Count Half Million in the USSR

First Contact For Many Years

There are 500,000 baptized members of the 4,000 churches in the Russian Evangelical-Baptist Union. Including the Baptists, there are at least 3,000,000 Russians who believe what Baptists believe.

This information provided by Dr. W. O. Lewis, associate secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, following a recent meeting with a group of Baptist ministers from Russia, attending an international peace parley in Stockholm, Sweden.

The occasion marked the first time in many years that any direct contact had been made between the Baptist Alliance and Russian Baptists.

The peace meeting was called by Swedish and British Quakers. The Russian government was issued an invitation to send representatives, preferably men sympathetic to religion. All but the interpreter were Baptists.

Dr. Lewis flew from London to see them. He discussed with them the possibility of having Russia represented at the next Baptist World Alliance Congress in London in 1955.

Progressive Conservative associations of Vancouver Island will hold a joint, informal, public reception for one of the party's leading national figures, John Diefenbaker, at the curling rink, on Quadra Street, from 3 to 5 p.m. next Wednesday. James George, P.C. candidate in Victoria in the last federal election, is making arrangements for the reception.

Theosophists Bring Noted Lecturer Here

International lecturer Geoffrey Hodson, touring North America under the auspices of the Theosophical Society of America, will be presented by the Victoria branch of the society on Sunday at 8 p.m. at 904 Government Street.

Mr. Hodson was born and educated in England. For nearly 25 years he has lectured in many parts of the world for the Theosophical Society. His tours have taken him to Europe, North America, New Zealand, Australia and India. Mr. Hodson was last in this country in 1933. He is author of a series of books on theosophical subjects and one of the ablest exponents of theosophical concepts.

Much interested in vegetarianism and animal welfare, Mr. Hodson has written on these subjects also. He is president of several animal welfare associations and health groups in New Zealand and Australia.

The Theosophical Society, founded in New York in 1875, has for its objects the forming of a nucleus of the universal brotherhood of mankind without distinction of race, creed or color; the study of comparative religions, philosophy and science, and the investigation of nature's laws.

Mr. Hodson will speak to the public on "The Life Which Begins After Death."

Fashions for Music

Because they recognize Irene Byatt as a potentially great artist . . . because they know how difficult the path is for the young and talented . . . because they are proud of her as a Victorian, find inspiration and pleasure in her golden contralto voice . . . and because they admire her as a sincere and devoted student, clubwomen of Victoria have banded together and with the help of city business firms, have arranged the benefit show, "Fashions in Music." It is to be held at Club Sirocco, Wednesday afternoon and evening commencing at 2.30 and 8.30. Irene, pictured here wearing a specially-designed gown of shell pink lace and taffeta, will sing during both afternoon and evening showings. Mainland professional models will display latest modes specially brought from various style centres across Canada. "Fashions in Music" will conclude with a striking autumn wedding scene. Mallek's Ltd., suits, coats, dresses and furs, Minnie Beveridge, hats and McMartin's Leather Goods, are city firms responsible for the show.

A strapless short formal is modeled by Teddy Ellis, right. It is silver brocade, dotted with rhinestones and has a pleated mist-grey nylon net insert and matching stole. Centre, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, immediate past president, Women's Canadian Club, wears a horizon blue coat in a wool and fur fabric with big collar of blue Arctic fox. With it she has chosen a black velvet hat with osprey and diamante ornament. Mrs. C. C. Warren, Victoria Nursing Home Auxiliary, models a black and white English worsted suit, completing her ensemble with four skins of silver blue mink and black velvet hat with sweeping side feathers.

An evening formal in eggshell nylon net over taffeta is modeled by Pat Oakes, above. Strapless, it features iridescent sequins in a scroll embroidery over the bodice and upper part of bouffant skirt. It is worn with matching stole.

Mrs. Thomas Lumsden, regent of Municipal Chapter, IOOE, is shown here in a Canadian squirrel coat in claret tone. It has a striped taffeta lining with scarf to match and handsome cuff detail. Her hat is brown velvet with gold bead and pheasant feather trim. Mrs. Charles Smith, president, Business and Professional Women's Club, is wearing a suit of dark brown English cloth with brown mole trim and a beige hat touched with parrot feathers.

Mrs. H. Parkes, president of the Toastmistress Club, shows a Canadian squirrel three-quarter-length coat in the new honey shade. It features deep cuffs, softly rounded collar with back detail. Her hat is a lovely model in glitter green long-haired beaver. Mrs. Warren, seated, has selected a coat of 100-per-cent pure Llama in a sand tone with hand-stitched detail and stand-up collar, and Mrs. C. W. Paulin, Family and Children's Services Auxiliary, wears a coat of pure alpaca with smart beaver collar and a pixie-style hat of crushed raspberry with black feather and diamante trim.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Buy Foam Rubber Coasters
... Silent, Dripless, Neat

By PENNY SAVER

Hosts and hostesses who are "in the know" are using coasters made of latex foam rubber! Here's why: because latex stretches, it fits onto the glass and clings to it, therefore making no sound when the glass is placed on a table. It goes without saying that these coasters stop the drips and prevent scratching of your best coffee table surface. (Wonder how many sets I've sold now.) Just to make sure, I'll give with some more details! Guess you've been wondering just what the coasters look like. Well, they are nice enough to serve to the best of company, for they are hand silk-screen painted in washable colors. My favorite was in a bright red and black tartan. The set includes eight glass coasters and one bottle coaster and is priced at $2.95.

Considering the number of pieces in the next set I'm going to tell you about, it's much more expensive, but I wouldn't be at all surprised if folks like them better and buy them instead. There are three pieces, two tumbler coasters and one bottle coaster. Selling point is the decoration painted on the pieces. Coasters are yellow with funny little green scotty dogs; on one of the glass coasters it says "Me" and on the other it says "You." On the bottle coasters is printed "Us." I just knew you'd like them... $2.19.

Now if you're looking for something very plain, get the set of four latex coasters (tumbler size) for $1.75. They come in a variety of plain colors and are every bit as nice as the fancier ones.

Anyone looking for a teapot? How about one that is insulated with an aluminum cover? They say it does the trick... tea stays hot for a much longer period. Price is $3.95.

When you can buy a nylon tricot nightgown for $6.95... it's a bargain! This style has no fancy frills or permanent pleats, but then, I always say that something plain and well-made is better in the long run, anyway. Comes in dainty colors of rose, aqua and pink.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Here's Information About Annoying Facial Blemishes

Here's some information about those small blemishes which so often somewhat mar a face.

Freckles: As you know freckles increase in color and number when you are out in the sun. After a summer many women who do not usually have freckles find a few. They fade out during the winter. The only way to lessen the number you get is to take your outdoor exercise and fun in the late afternoon or early morning. Also apply one of the screening lotions or creams before going outdoors.

Bleaches will help fade freckles. Use one of the bleaching creams on the market, or cucumber or lemon juice, or buttermilk. Straight lemon juice is too strong for some skins. You may have to dilute it.

If your freckles are so extreme that they are a real handicap to you they can be removed through sandpaper surgery. If you are interested in this talk to a plastic surgeon about it.

Moles: Never try to do anything about a mole yourself. Do not handle moles. These can be removed by a dermatologist. If you have a mole which is enlarging you should see a dermatologist about it even if you do not wish to have it removed for cosmetic reasons.

Warts: The same goes for warts. Do not try to remove them yourself. Let a dermatologist do it.

Whiteheads: Often these disappear of their own accord. No one seems to know exactly what causes them. Stimulation seems to be helpful. You get this through general body exercises which send the blood zooming around and also through local stimulation. Wash your face several times a day with soap and water and a complexion brush. Use the brush in a rotary manner. The bristles should have body but should not be tough enough to be irritating.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Fiesta Pie—1 No. 1 can whole cranberry sauce, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, 1 cup sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 3 egg yolks (well beaten), 1 cup fresh orange juice, 1 tablespoon plain gelatin, 1/4 cup cold water, 1 teaspoon grated orange peel, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 3 egg whites (stiffly beaten), 1 9-inch baked pie shell.

Combine cranberry sauce and cornstarch and cook until thick, about 5 minutes. Cool. Combine sugar, salt, egg yolks and orange juice in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water until thick, or until mixture coats the spoon, stirring constantly. Soak gelatin in cold water. Add softened gelatin and grated orange peel to the mixture and mix well. Then add lemon juice and still until it begins to set. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into gelatin mixture. Pour into baked 9-inch pie shell and chill until firm. Spread with cranberry sauce and place in refrigerator until serving time. Serves 6.

Pan fried frozen fish fillets are extra tasty when served with something crisp. Our favorite fish sauce has crisp slivered almonds in it and is made like this. Sauté 1/2 cup slivered blanched almonds in a bit of butter until golden. Add 2 teaspoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt and a dash black pepper. Slowly add 1/2 cup light cream and cook and stir until thickened. Enough for four servings fish.

MRS. LYDIA ARSENS DEMANDS PROBE OF B.C. PHONE RATES

In her maiden speech in the Legislature Friday, Victoria MLA Mrs. Lydia Arsens recommended an investigation into the cause of "such outrageous telephone rates" in B.C. which are "four times higher than in Alberta."

She is the third MLA to rap the telephone company in the past week.

A Victoria-Nanaimo phone call, she said, costs 65 cents, but in Alberta, the same sort of call is 25 cents.

"Something is radically wrong," Mrs. Arsens said. "Something should be done. If we can't get results, let us invite another firm to start up in opposition."

B.C.'s Premier 'Clever, Foxy' Says Uphill

Simple Liquor Law Fernie MLA's Aim

Jovial Tom Uphill of Fernie, who admits he comes from the "city of pretty girls and gallant men," tickled legislators Friday and made the ladies in the galleries blush.

He started off by congratulating the intelligent citizens of Fernie riding for re-electing him. He's now been in the House 34 years.

He then congratulated Premier Bennett whom he summed up like this:

"Clever, witty and foxy—one of the best debaters. I give him credit."

The Fernie MLA said prosecution and not persecution should be the motto of the new Liquor Act.

"There's some good policemen but some hellish ones," he said. "Some of them prosecute persons who have had charges against them dismissed in court."

He said regulations should be made simple "so that overzealous policemen who are over-anxious to get convictions won't misinterpret them."

"Instead of trying to prevent crime, they incite crime," Mr. Uphill stated.

He repeated his annual plea for government-conducted sweepstakes to aid hospitals.

The government's proposed 10 per cent reduction in car licenses didn't please Mr. Uphill, who thought the cut "paltry."

WINNIPEG, Man. (BUP)—County Court Judge J. I. Morkin ruled Friday an unsuccessful candidate for the federal riding of Selkirk, Man., could not have a recount of ballots cast in the Aug. 10 national election.

William Bryce, the CCF candidate, asked for the recount after being edged by Liberal R. J. Wood by 189 votes.

County Court Judge C. G. Keith had set Sept. 28 as the date for a recount of votes cast in the riding, but he became ill.

Morkin said Keith should have set a date for the recount within four days of receiving Bryce's request to comply with provisions of the Elections Act.

Twenty-Sixty Club Starts After Interlopers Rapped

BY TOM MERRIMAN

After another stormy meeting the Twenty-Sixty Club was finally launched at a meeting this week with five members short of the objective of 20.

At the first meeting 10 out of 20 invited joined the club. They were asked to bring one or more prospective members to Tuesday's meeting.

Trouble started when three women were among the number.

"We can not be troubled with women at our meetings. This is definitely a stag club," said the founder, D. G. Hew, as soon as the women appeared.

His ruling was challenged by some and heartily supported by others.

"The presence of women will cramp our style, limit our debates and generally act as a restraint on the proceedings," Hew said. "I am against them completely," he said with considerable emphasis.

His stand was supported by B. S. P. Stortford, "Sandy" Heath and E. R. Derby, who were among those present at the first meeting.

Two of the women voiced resentment at Hew's stand in no uncertain terms.

One described him as an "old fuddy-duddy" 50 years behind the times.

"By what right do you presume such superiority over women when in the last decade they have proved their equality in the field of literature, politics, science and administration, aye, and even in the armed forces," she said.

As the lady continued her speech and refused to stop on the chairman's request, he spread his hands and looked helpless at the members around him.

"See what I mean," he said. "If we admit women they will be running us instead of us running a club."

"Are you trying to be a dictator," one of the women asked. "Yes," Hew frankly admitted. "Just for the purpose of avoiding this kind of situation one of the rules of the club is that the chairman shall have the right of a dictator."

Challenged by the third woman to take a test vote of the meeting, Hew emphatically refused.

The matter was settled when Hew agreed to invoke the blackball system on membership applications for all present.

Fifteen of those present were admitted to membership.

Seven blackballs were rolled against the three women, four more than the necessary number to reject an application for membership.

The meeting was tense for a moment when it was found that Hew himself had failed for membership with three balls rolled against him.

"These," said Stortford, "must be the three votes of the women we have decided not to admit to the club and it would be unfair to reject the founder because of feminine vindictiveness."

A new vote was taken and Hew was accepted for membership unanimously.

Is this a "CAUTION"?

The young lady is investigating the situation carefully and mother has not been lacking in care, either. But when an Executor files a "Caution" it means something else again.

Many confusing terms—and difficult technicalities—may be involved in the settling of your Estate. Certainly, it is no task for an inexperienced friend or relative.

When you appoint National Trust as your Executor, you can be sure that your Estate will be managed efficiently and economically—with the human understanding that comes from long experience.

We invite your inquiries.

Bill Brings Legislative Blessing To Douk 'Bread and Salt' Marriage

BESSIE IN JAPAN

Balanced precariously on the narrow ledge, I put one leg down into the water... then the other. Now, I was standing in the tub with the hot water just above my knees.

Half way down in the tub was a small shelf that most certainly was a seat. If a Japanese woman had sat on it, the water would have risen to her neck. But not me. When I got crowded down on it the water just came to my armpits.

I was surrounded by boxes. When I put my arms down straight at my sides I felt as if I was wearing a wooden kimono.

But the water was soothing and so comfortably hot I was soon lulled into a false sense of security. So much so that I got venturesome. I eased down beneath the shelf and sat on the bottom of the tub. Now, I was jack-knifed into the thing, knees under my chin, arms clasped around my knees.

(Nice position to be caught if there had been an earthquake.)

Have you ever tried getting up and out of a box when you are doubled into it and you have a small shelf right over your right shoulder.

NO SHRINKAGE

You're right! I couldn't do it! ... I wiggled... I squirmed... I tried to shrink... it was no use!

I sat and thought about it for awhile. Then I wiggled, squirmed and tried to shrink again... Still no use!

The bathroom was off at the end of a hall, a long way from the room in which Mary Russell (the Vancouver girl I am traveling with) and I were to sleep

...but I finally made up my mind I simply had to make an attempt to rouse her.

"Mary!" ... I called softly ... No answer.

"Mary-eee!" ... a little louder. Still no answer, but I heard a suggestive silence fall on the lower floor where the Japanese family we were staying with had been talking.

"MARY-EEE!" ... I shouted. The children stopped calling to each other in the lane.

"What is it?" Mary finally answered.

All was silent below stairs now, every ear alerted for my answer.

"I'm stuck in this tub," is what I said.

FUNNY-TO-THEM

There was a chorus of giggles... downstairs... in the lane, and a shriek of laughter from Mary. A patter of slippers came along the hall... up the stairs. The rice paper door was rolled back and four heads peered in at me... three Japanese and Mary.

There were more giggles and one of the little Japanese women said, "You are top big for Japanese woman's tub." SHE was telling me!

Someone took the wooden seat off my shoulder, someone else offered me their hands. Mary held a towel. And, while not a Venus in any sense of the word, I certainly rose from the water, which sloshed over every one.

Did I try it again? I did every night I was in Kyoto... It was the only way to get a bath. And I soon learned to sit like a jack-knife... quite comfortably, thank you!

I'm sure it's a much better stunt than anything Humphry Davy learned from his Yogi.

TORONTO (CP)—Lorne Greene, familiar figure in Canadian radio and theatre, has been signed to play the male lead in a Broadway play opening in December.

Mr. Greene will star with Katharine Cornell in the Howard Lindsay-Russell Crouse play, "The Prescott Proposals."

His signing came on the anniversary of his introduction to Canadian radio. On Sept. 25, 1939, he joined the staff of station CBO, Ottawa, following graduation from Queen's University, Kingston. Mr. Greene received his early dramatic training with the Queen's Drama Guild.

In the same year he was brought to Toronto by the CBC to read the national news broadcasts on a Dominion-wide network.

TEHRAN (Reuters)—Former foreign minister Hussein Fatemi has disguised himself as a woman, even to a face-covering veil, in order to evade arrest, police said today.

G-Man, Killer Die in Duel In Movie House

BALTIMORE (AP)—A west coast desperado was killed and a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent fatally wounded Friday night in a blazing gun battle at a downtown movie house.

Most of the movie audience, absorbed with the crime picture on the screen, didn't realize a squad of FBI men was shooting it out with the trapped gunman.

Another agent was seriously wounded in the battle on the mezzanine of the Town Theatre here.

Shot to death in a phone booth as he tried to place a call to Los Angeles was John Elgin Johnson, 34-year-old former bank robber wanted for parole violation and as a murder suspect.

Agent J. Brady Murphy, 36, of the local FBI office, was shot in the lower abdomen and died today at hospital. Agent Ray Fox, 39, was shot in the hip.

They were leading a squad of FBI men up the steps when Johnson—being stalled by a Los Angeles operator on his call until officers could get there—suddenly turned and opened fire through the glass door of the booth.

Murphy sagged to the floor. Fox fell backward toward the stairs. Other agents moved up emptying their pistols into the booth.

The phone booth was riddled with bullet holes, the telephone book, was punctured and shattered glass lay around the floor.

Johnson was dead when he arrived at hospital.

In Los Angeles a newspaper man related how he talked by long distance telephone for almost an hour with the convict while the call was traced and the FBI closed in and killed the desperado.

The reporter, Sid Hughes, told of his experience in a copyrighted story in the Los Angeles Mirror.

Hughes wrote that he had known the ex-convict, John Elgin Johnson, for some time and had tried to aid in his rehabilitation. On Friday Hughes received a call from Johnson in Baltimore.

The reporter said he asked Johnson to call him back in an hour. Hughes, in the meantime, notified the FBI. An hour later the reporter received a second call from Johnson.

Hughes wrote of the second call as follows:

"Sid, I got a funny feeling."

Johnny kept saying.

"What do you mean, Johnny?"

"Well, when you live like I do you get these kind of feelings and you play 'em," he answered.

As we talked in friendly, amiable fashion the origin point of his call to me was being tracked by the Baltimore Telephone Company.

The operators nailed it down to the theatre in downtown Baltimore.

The shooting itself had a weird, half-world quality as it sounded to me over the long distance, Hughes wrote.

The gun shots had a "jingling coin" tone, as though someone with a handful of quarters had poured them into the phone booth in six blasts. It was like slugs shattering a coin box.

"I'll never forget that sound, followed by a terrible kind of silence."

52 Douks Sentenced

VANCOUVER, B.C. (BUP)—

Fifty-two Doukhobor fanatics, accused of "hiding behind religion" to flout the law, began serving prison terms ranging up to three years today for a nude parade staged around a country schoolhouse in the Kootenay Valley.

Forty-five of the Sons of Freedom sect, including 10 women, began the maximum three-year term for the nudity. Two women and one man received two-year terms. Other "token" sentences ranged from four days to one day.

Another 69 remanded Doukhobors will be sentenced October 2.

IWA Interior Workers Vote for Strike Action

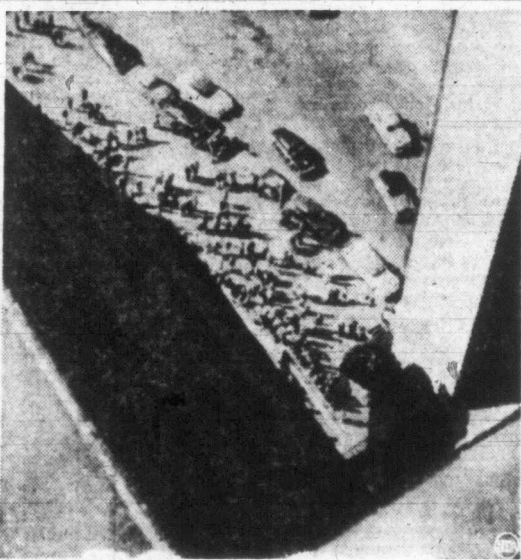

VANCOUVER (CP)—Woodworkers in B.C.'s northern interior have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action and there are strong indications woodsmen in the southern interior will follow suit.

This means approximately 5,000 woodworkers throughout the whole interior may be picketing some 70 mills to back up demands for higher wages.

International Woodworkers of America (CIO) members in the northern division voted 1,368 to 810 for a strike, George Mitchell, IWA district secretary, said today.

Mr. Mitchell said no date will be set for the strike until operators say whether they want further negotiations.

"We will give them a reasonable length of time after offer-

She Threatened to Jump

Mrs. Millicent Armin, 36, stands on the ledge of the 20th floor of the Chicago Tribune Tower, threatening to jump. About 6,000 spectators gathered on the street to watch the tense scene. Mrs. Armin was on the edge for an hour and 35 minutes before a priest holding her dog lured her into the building. A television station set up a camera on a building across the street and televised the drama.

U.S., SPAIN SIGN PACT FOR DEFENSE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and Spain today signed a 20-year defense agreement giving the U.S. the right to develop and use naval and air bases on Spanish soil and assuring Spain military equipment from the United States.

The action brought Franco's Spain into partnership with the United States in the West's defense against the danger of Soviet attack.

Ambassador James C. Dunn and Spanish Foreign Minister Alberto Martin Artajo also signed economic assistance and mutual defense assistance agreements, the latter spelling out the specific conditions under which Spain will receive military aid.

The state department released the text of the three agreements, together with a statement saying that assistance to Spain totaling $226,000,000 will be supplied under the mutual security program during the fiscal year ending next June 30.

The announcement said that $85,000,000 will be for defense support assistance—meaning various uses in some way contributing to the development of military strength—and $141,000,000 for actual military equipment.

A major aim of the U.S. aid to Spain is to modernize, in some degree and over a period of years, the Franco government's army and naval forces. The army now is estimated at 30 divisions.

The specific bases, to be initially developed by the United States at a cost in addition to the $226,000,000 for Spanish aid, were not named in the defense agreement.

The agreements became effective upon signature and the main defense agreement stated that it would be in force "for a period of 10 years, automatically extended for two successive periods of five years" unless formally terminated by either party.

After completing the attempt, the pilot zoomed into a double victory roll over the Royal Air Force field here, showing he believed he had bettered Friday's mark. (See story Page 3)

4-Alarm Blaze Razes False Creek Rope Plant

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Vancouver firemen battled a four-alarm blaze today on Granville Island near downtown Vancouver.

Officials said the damage may be estimated at close to $500,000.

They said the buildings of the Wright's Rope Company had been gutted and were a total loss.

No injuries were reported.

Firemen brought the blaze under control several hours after it broke out.

For a short time, the blaze, that threatened to spread to adjoining buildings, shot gusts of thick, black smoke hundreds of feet into the air.

The scene of the fire was situated almost directly under the new Granville Street Bridge.

SET CLOCK BACK 1 HOUR

Daylight saving time will end officially tomorrow and clocks will be set back one hour to resume standard time.

The approved time for setting back clocks is at 2 a.m. daylight time, Sunday, which becomes 1 a.m. standard time.

But there is no law to say you can't wait until you wake up Sunday morning.

The important fact to remember is—set the clocks back one hour.

Laing Attacks Bennett 'Gag'

Liberal Leader Arthur Laing said today legislators should be allowed to debate individual expenditures under the supply bill to be introduced in the Legislature next week.

"It is a negation of the system for Premier Bennett to disallow debate on individual estimates," Mr. Laing said.

The House last March approved a $94,000,000 interim supply bill to provide funds for the first six months of 1953-54 after the government's defeat. A second supply bill is required now for the final six months.

The Liberal leader's statement came as a minor constitutional issue appeared to be brewing over Premier Bennett's statement that only the motion on the supply bill can be debated—not each item.

The issue will reach the floor of the House next week.

Party leaders have claimed the premier is trying to cut off debate. But the premier says no debate can be held on each estimate because they were all passed by the last legislature.

He said questions about individual estimates can be placed on the order paper, but the ministers can't be questioned on the floor of the House.

Mr. Laing contends there could have been a new government and all new members.

"To suggest that these new members would sit in parliament with no control over funds expended during their term of office would be a negation of the tradition and safety that some debate take place on this second supply bill."

Returns From Dead After 38 Years

CHESTER, Eng. (Reuters)—

Fred Walker, 60, "returned from the dead" to his home and family here 38 years after he was reported killed in the First World War.

Fred Walker suffered from amnesia from the time he stepped on a German land mine at Loos, Sept. 25, 1915, until his sister and brother discovered him, ill, bearded and penniless, at a local hospital earlier this week.

The state department released the text of the three agreements, together with a statement saying that assistance to Spain totaling $226,000,000 will be supplied under the mutual security program during the fiscal year ending next June 30.

Times Secures Rights To New Churchill Book

Stuart Keate, publisher of the Times, announced today that the Times, in collaboration with Weekend Picture Magazine has obtained publication rights to the sixth and final volume of Sir Winston Churchill's memoirs on the Second World War.

The serialization of the new book, entitled "Triumph and Tragedy," will begin in Weekend Magazine on October 24 and then will be carried in the daily issues of The Times thereafter and on Weekend on Saturdays, for a total of 30 instalments.

The sixth volume of Sir Winston's work is regarded as probably the most important. It covers the period from D-day up to the Yalta and Potsdam meetings.

The theme, in brief, is: "How the great democracies triumphed and so were able to resume the follies which so nearly cost them their life."

Prime Minister Churchill, maker of history and a man whose diversity of talents is already legendary, is acknowledged to be one of the great English historians. His command of the language, the famous "Churchillian prose," is unrivalled. In writing "The Second World War" his position has been unique. Not only was he himself at the hub of the activities about which he writes but he has had access to those parts of the documentary record which have until now been kept in the confidential files.

This final volume deals with that exciting period when the democracies swept to victory and planted the seeds of future uncertainty. In the light of increasing world tension it has special significance today.

IN TWO STAGES

Book I is "The Tide of Victory." It opens with a master strategist's report and evaluation of the invasion of France and carries through the action-packed year of 1944. Balanced against the battle action of D-Day, across Europe and the Pacific, Churchill the statesman tells of the fateful decisions and conflicts in the meetings at Moscow and at the Second Quebec Conference, including revealing details about the world personalities who step across this stage of history.

This sets the scene for Book II, "The Iron Curtain." Here is the story of Yalta and the opening of the chasm between east and west, climaxed by the Potsdam meeting and counterpointed by the final military action which led to the German surrender and the downfall of Japan.

This epic tale, which begins October 24 in the Times, is one of the great records of our time, told by the only man alive with the full knowledge of not only what happened but how it happened.

FLORIDA HIT
PANAMA CITY, Fla. (UP)—A powerful hurricane slammed inland over the northwest Florida coast today. High tides, and 100-mile-an-hour winds knocked down power lines and broke store-front windows.

Thousands of residents of the area abandoned their homes and shore cottages to spend the night in emergency shelters. The town of Apalachicola was cut off from all but radio contact.

The centre of the storm moved inland a few miles west of here during the morning. Hurricane-force winds spread for miles along the northwest Florida coast in both directions, and heavy rain and high winds were predicted in southeast Alabama and southwest Georgia, in the path of the storm.

Three-Piece Garbage Set Socred Member's Scheme

Victoria householders should be "compelled" to have three garbage cans, and keep their gardens neat Mrs. Lydia Arsens, (S.C. Victoria), told a somewhat startled Legislature Friday afternoon.

The garbage problem, she explained, could be solved by making householders segregate it into three containers—flat-topped cans, papers, and waste foods.

"The waste foods could be taken to our city park and composted, thus providing a much superior fertilizer than the commercial product at a great saving," Mrs. Arsens said.

She also suggested water-fronts and beaches could be cleared by youngsters as a project, making an ideal tourist haven.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Woodworkers in B.C.'s northern interior have voted overwhelmingly in favor of strike action.

This means approximately 5,000 woodworkers throughout the whole interior may be picketing some 70 mills to back up demands for higher wages.

International Woodworkers of America (IWA) members in the northern division voted 1,368 to 810 for a strike. George Mitchell, IWA district secretary, said today.

Mr. Mitchell said no date will be set for the strike until operators say whether they want further negotiations.

"We will give them a reasonable length of time after offering to resume talks Monday," said Mitchell. "If they don't answer, we strike, probably right away."

Already, he said, one mill, at Prince George, has been shut down. About 100 men in the Prince George Planing Mills struck Friday.

Writer Meets New Problem; Gets Stuck in Japanese Tub

Mrs. Elizabeth Forbes, women's editor of the Victoria Daily Times, is visiting Japan as guest of Their Excellencies Hon. E. W. and Mrs. Mayhew at the Canadian Embassy in Tokyo. This is one of a series of articles describing her experiences and impressions.

BY BESSIE FORBES

"Do you know how to take a Japanese bath?" Yochi asked when I arrived at my boarding house in Kyoto.

"I certainly do!" I boasted. "I was initiated at Atami about two weeks ago."

"O-h-h-h! How nice!" said Yochi. "Well, the water is not so good here as it is at Atami."

Dusty and tired from a seven-hour train trip from Tokyo, I looked forward to a good soak in a Japanese tub. I shook off my clothes in the small anteroom, grabbed my soap and towel, rolled back the sliding door and stepped into the bathroom.

Nothing I had learned in the famly-sized affair I swam in at Atami prepared me for the bath I faced in Kyoto.

I was standing in a small tiled room (cupboard we'd call it at home). There were the usual taps in one corner, the run-off holes in the floor, and a small tin bucket for sloshing water . . . and, in a corner a wooden box, about four feet square, topped by a second box not more than two and half feet square covered with two wooden planks.

In a hole under the first tub a gas burner was going full blast.

This was the tub! Built for a small-statured Japanese woman. While I soaped and sloshed I tried to figure it out but as far as I could see no amount of ingenuity could get my 150 pounds into that tub . . . all at one time.

First thing to be done was step up on the top of the first box, the lip of which extended in a sort of platform, around the smaller box. Now I was so high in the air I could look
